CAPITAL YOUTH KEEN TO ENTER ESSAY CONTEST

Students in High Schools Eager for Details of Foreign Trip.

FLAG ASSOCIATION'S STAFF IS KEPT BUSY

Boys and Girls Plan to File Applications Early in Try for Honors.

Announcement in The Washington Post yesterday that two outstanding students of the Washington public schools will be given free trips to London and Paris as "Envoys of Friendship," under the auspices of the United States Flag Association, brought instant response from the youth of Washington, according to Col. James A. Moss, president general of the Flag Association.

"Boys and girls of high school age certainly read The Post," Col. Moss said. "Although the offices of the United States Flag Association are supposed to be closed on Sunday, our telephone rang all day long and a clerk was compelled to remain in the office until late last evening in order that those who called for further information might not be disappointed.

"We referred every child calling to The Washington Post, telling them that our plan for this good-will mission would be disclosed fully in that publication."

Schools to Have Applications.

Application blanks for the junior and senior high school pupils between the ages of 14 and 18 wishing to enter the essay contest will be in the hands of the principals of each high school, junior and senior, by Thursday, Col. Moss said. Any boy or girl wishing to enter can obtain one of the blanks from the principal of his or her particular school. Arrangements to this effect have been made with the school authorities, who are supporting with enthusiasm this movement in the interest of American patriotism and world friendship.

H. Barrett Learned, acting president of the Board of Education, in a letter to Col. Moss, gives wholehearted indorsement to the plan and expresses deep appreciation to Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, who is patroness for the Washington boy and girl on the patriotic pilgrimage in this country and the good-will trip to France and England. Mr. Learned's letter reads:

"The project of the United States Flag Association for the education of the children of America in world friendship based on rational patriotism is one whose far-reaching effects no one can foretell. It is a most worthy undertaking that deserves the support of all loyal Americans and well-wishers of mankind, and the Board of Education of the District of Columbia is only too glad to assist the Flag Association in selecting a boy and girl to represent the school children of Washington in the inauguration of this great youth educational movement.

Mrs. Loose Is Lauded.

"As acting president of the board I wish to express to Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose the deep appreciation of the school authorities for her fine, patriotic generosity, which has made possible the representation of the public schools of the National Capital in the inauguration of this great

POLICEMAN IS HELD AS DRUNKEN DRIVER

Fifth Precinct Policeman Hiram Calvin McDaniel, 34 years old, was suspended from the police force yesterday morning following his arrest by Brentwood, Md., police on charges of driving while intoxicated, reckless driving and carrying a concealed weapon.

Taken in custody on Rhode Island avenue extended at the northern limits of Brentwood, between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning, while riding with a woman, McDaniel was taken immediately before Justice of the Peace Herbert J. Moffatt, in Hyattsville. No charge being preferred against the woman, who, officers said, McDaniel identified as his wife, she was released and McDaniel was lodged in the Bladensburg Jail.

He remained there until his release about 11 o'clock in the morning on a $1,250 bond signed by a professional bondsman after Lieut. Richard H. Mansfield, of the Fifth Precinct, and Lieut. Oscar J. Letterman, acting night inspector, conferred with Judge Moffatt and announced suspension of the arrested policeman pending appearance before the Police Trial Board.

McDaniel was released by Judge Moffatt for appearance at a hearing at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon before Judge J. Chew Sheriff, in Police Court in Hyattsville.

The arrest was made by Chief of Police Reuben E. Brown and his son, Policeman E. M. Brown, of Brentwood, after lying in wait a few moments on the highway for the McDaniel machine after it was said to have almost hit their police car in Hyattsville.

Policeman Brown explained that he was driving a Brentwood police car ahead of another police machine driven by his father, proceeding near the southern limits of Hyattsville on Rhode Island avenue, when they saw the McDaniel car proceeding toward Washington, swerve off the road, crash through an iron fence, run about 75 feet along the Washington Railway & Electric Co. tracks, before jumping into a curb and returning to the highway to a stop.

"The McDaniel car almost crashed into the machine I was driving," Policeman Brown said. "My father and I drove on down just into Brentwood, waited for the man and nabbed him as he drove in zigzagging dangerously over the road at a speed of from 40 to 45 miles an hour. A search showed that he was carrying a .32-caliber automatic revolver in an arm holster. It was not a service pistol, though."

McDaniel has been on the police force about twelve years. He was transferred about a month ago from the Seventh Precinct in Georgetown to the Fifth Precinct. He resides at 409 Four-and-a-half street southwest.

BROTHER OF VICTIM HELD IN GUN DEATH

Special to The Washington Post.

Easton, Md., March 15.—Guy Ewing, aged 45 years, was shot and killed last night at the home of his mother, Mrs. Hulda Ewing, near Old Chapel, about seven miles north of Easton, allegedly by his brother, Gilbert Ewing, aged 32 years, with a double-barreled shot gun.

Two shots were fired, one of which struck Guy Ewing in the right arm tearing off all of the flesh. Their younger brothers, Frank and Joseph, were sitting downstairs and hearing the shots, rushed upstairs to find Guy lying on the floor in a pool of blood, and Gilbert gone. They picked Guy up and, placing him in an automobile, brought him to the Emergency Hospital, Easton, but he was dead when they reached the hospital.

Sheriff A. Raymond Carroll was notified of the shooting and he and his deputies immediately started a search for Gilbert, but failed to find him. This morning Gilbert came to Easton and gave himself up and is now locked in the Easton Jail. He is alleged to have said he did not know how the shooting happened, except that when he entered his brother's room he jumped out of bed and tried to take the gun away from him and in so doing it went off, one of the loads entering his brother's arm.

Barking Dog Saves Life of Its Mistress

Mrs. Edna Powers Found Unconscious on Floor of Gas-Filled Room.

A small curly-haired dog yesterday morning probably saved the life of his mistress, Mrs. Edna Powers, 20, who was found unconscious in her gas-filled apartment at 1133 Thirteenth street northwest after she failed to answer her telephone when an attempt was made to notify her that her dog was barking in the lobby and disturbing tenants in the building.

After a continual ringing of her telephone failed to arouse her, the manager of the apartment house was called and Joseph Randall, colored, janitor, was sent to knock on her door. When repeated knocks brought no response, Randall broke open the door and found Mrs. Powell lying unconscious on the floor of her kitchen. Gas was flowing from three open jets on a stove.

The fire rescue squad and an ambulance from Emergency Hospital was summoned, and after being revived she was removed to the hospital, where physicians said her condition was not serious. She later returned home.

ACCUSED MEN SLAY SHERIFF; END OWN LIVES

Two Brothers Sought in Bank Robbery Shoot From Farmhouse.

DEPUTY IS WOUNDED TRYING TO NAB PAIR

Monticello, Ind., March 15 (U.P.). Two brothers murdered Sheriff Ray Fisher when he went to a farm home late today to arrest them on bank robbery charges and then shot themselves to death before a posse could arrest them.

The gun battle took place twelve miles north of here in the wild sand hill country near Iroquois River. Sheriff Fisher, of White County; his deputy, Barney Ireland, and Scott and William Talbert, middle-aged brothers, took part in the fatal skirmish.

Ireland escaped with a shotgun slug through his hand to tell the dramatic story of Fisher's death and the brothers' suddenly conceived suicide pact.

Fisher and Ireland drove to the farmhouse where Scott Talbert lived with his aged mother, to arrest him and his brother on bank robbery charges preferred by Lafayette, Ind., authorities.

Both Scott and William were in the house.

Shot Through Head.

"Come on out, boys," said Fisher, "I've got to arrest you."

Instead, the Talberts threw open the door, firing shotguns as they came. Fisher attempted to flee, but was killed instantly with a bullet through the back of his head.

Ireland also ran, darting around a barn. Both brothers fired volley after volley at him. One slug finally hit him in the hand. He dropped into a corn field, feigning death.

The brothers then returned to the house. Ireland heard two shots a few minutes later. The deputy hastened to a nearby cross-roads store, where he telephoned to Monticello for aid.

A posse hurried to the farm, pushed open the door of the house and found the bodies of the brothers on the floor.

Dr. D. A. Henry, coroner, said Scott Talbert had killed his brother with a shotgun charge and then turned the gun on himself.

Mother in Room.

Mrs. Amanda Talbert, their 70-year-old mother, was found cowering in a corner of the room. The Talbert brothers, one 45 years old and the other 40, always had been known as honest, hard-working farmers in the rugged country near the junction of the Kankakee and Iroquois Rivers. They had never been in trouble. Scott had tilled his mother's farm and William had supported his wife on another farm 2 miles away.

Sheriff Fisher attempted to arrest them for questioning by Lafayette police, who said Frank Bennett, suspected bank robber, had implicated them in a bank raid there a month ago.

3 GIRL WITNESSES ON VEHICLE HELD

Wilmington, N. C., March 15 (U.P.). A pitched gun battle between a mail-truck driver who mistook sheriff's deputies for bandits and the deputies who thought the mail truck was a rum-running car resulted in death of two men here early today.

W. Paul Starling, New Hanover County deputy sheriff, and Leopold Roberts, driving a United States mail truck packed with a consignment of mail from Goldsboro to Wilmington, were killed.

Starling, with Deputies E. J. Hale, F. B. Crews and Port Davis, a county patrolman, had stationed themselves at a Smith Creek bridge, 1 mile north of here on Highway 40, early today following a tip that a liquor car would pass that point.

Shooting Is Started.

The deputies stepped out in the light of the mail truck as Roberts drove along on his nightly journey with the mail. Roberts, who previously had reported to postal authorities here that attempts had been made to hold up his truck, stopped and started shooting at the deputies.

Starling, who walked to the machine, returned the fire and dropped dead as he reached the side of the mail truck.

Sheriff John Morris, after an investigation, announced tonight that Patrolman Davis was in full uniform when he ordered the truck to stop and that the machine bore no identifying marks to indicate it was other than a private automobile.

"Robert apparently got excited and shot the officer without pausing to identify him," Sheriff John Morris told the United Press tonight.

"We had arrested one rum-runner, Walter James, of Wilmington, who had 30 gallons in his automobile near the same spot last night. When we took him to the police station the desk sergeant gave us a tip that another truck containing liquor probably would be coming along.

The officers went out to the bridge again. They had stopped one automobile on the bridge and had discovered the driver was not carrying liquor when the mail truck approached. They asked the first driver to wait and formed a line across the narrow bridge in the bright lights of the oncoming truck.

"Patrolman Davis was in full uniform and the lights shown brightly on the metal buttons of his coat. When the truck stopped about 25 feet away, Deputy Starling advanced slowly forward in the light like any gentleman would do.

Killed Each Other.

"When Starling stopped at the side of the machine Roberts opened the

Rum Fleet Is Defeated In North Coast Battle

Master Group of Liquor Runners Loses Two Vessels, Six Men and 1,700 Sacks of Cargo to Coast Guards.

New London, Conn., March 15 (A. P.).—A master fleet of rum runners, which for several days has been reported hovering outside the 12-mile limit of the New England coast, last night attempted to outgeneral the Coast Guard.

It ended manuevers minus two vessels, six men and 1,700 sacks of liquor. One of the vessels was captured and the other sank in 120 feet of water.

Constantly in motion to avoid the shifting searchlights of the Coast Guard, the fleet, the largest reported here in many months, sent decoys to lure the guards off the rum routes. Unloaded ships dashed back and forth through the patrol boat lines. Where they broke through they were followed by heavily laden liquor vessels.

At midnight the fisherman trawl Notus, with three men and 700 bags of liquor aboard, was cornered and forced to beach on the shores of Fort Pond Bay. The men and liquor were captured.

Soon the rummer speedboat 605-H dashed toward shore amid a volley from patrol-boat 1-pounders. Suddenly it attempted to reverse its course to return to the 12-mile limit, was caught in the backwash and sank. As it went down the CG-808 drew alongside and captured its three-man crew and a portion of the 1,000 sacks of liquor aboard.

OFFICER FIRED UPON; TREASURY MAN HELD

W. E. Smith Jailed in Fairfax After Shots Are Directed at Policeman.

A Treasury Department draftsman is being held in the Fairfax County Jail after he allegedly fired three shots at County Policeman Carl McIntosh as the officer approached a parked automobile on Chain Bridge Hill early yesterday. One shot passed through the officer's collar and powder from another burned his face.

W. E. Smith, 23, said to be a pistol marksman, who lives on Columbia road northwest near Fifteenth street, and Dorothy Talmadge, 22, of Sherrier place near Conduit road, were the two persons in the car from which the shots were fired, according to McIntosh.

As he walked alongside of the car, a shot was fired at him. McIntosh said, "I am a policeman." Another shot was the answer. Powder seared his face. McIntosh dove behind the automobile and peered through the rear window. A third shot passed a few inches from his neck and through the collar of his coat.

McIntosh drew his pistol and threatened to shoot unless the driver came out of the machine and surrendered. Smith climbed from the machine with his hands in the air. He dropped his gun to the ground. McIntosh picked up Smith's pistol

100 Escape Death In Virginia Wreck

Mullens, W. Va., March 15 (A.P.).—The locomotive of passenger train No. 15 of the Virginian Railroad was wrecked tonight as it ran into a slide of rocks about 20 miles from Mullens.

Possible serious injury to between 100 and 150 passengers and the train crew was averted, officials reported, because the train was slowing down to stop at Rocky Station, a few hundred feet further on. Passengers and train crew escaped with bruises.

The train, operated between Princeton and Pireco, Mercer County, was rounding a curve and passing through a cut. Because of these conditions the engineer reported he was unable to see the slide until he was almost upon it. The engine was hurled off the track but remained upright. Several feet of rail were torn up, and in its plunge the locomotive carried with it telegraph and telephone poles lining the trackway. All cars of the train, however, remained on the track.

ALFONSO GUARDED ON BRITISH VISIT

Spanish King Arrives to See Princess Beatrice Amid Cordon of Police.

London, March 15 (A.P.).—Victoria Station was heavily guarded this evening when King Alfonso of Spain arrived to visit his mother-in-law, Princess Beatrice, who is recovering from a serious illness. The king left Paris at noon, after spending the night there.

The credentials of all persons approaching the railroad platform were carefully examined. Those who were not travelers and had no business there were denied admittance to the station.

The Duke of York, the Marquis of Carisbrooke, as well as the personnel of the Spanish Embassy, welcomed the monarch at the station. The Spanish Ambassador had met Alfonso on his arrival at Dover and accompanied him to London.

Immediately after his arrival the king, who is staying at the West End Hotel, drove to Kensington Palace to see Princess Beatrice, who is the aunt of King George.

The princess' illness followed upon an accident in which she fell and broke her arm. Alfonso's wife, Queen Victoria, came to London to nurse her mother and recently returned to Madrid after Beatrice improved.

Paris, March 15 (A.P.).—After spending the night here and attending church, King Alfonso, of Spain, departed at noon for London. The monarch arrived here yesterday from Madrid. He was accompanied by high government officials and a police guard as far as Calais.

During the night, extreme precautions were taken to guard the hotel in which the king spent the night.

Santiago Albo, the liberal leader who declined to form a new cabinet after the cecent resignation of Premier Damaso Berenguer, did not talk with the sovereign.

His home burned yetaterday. Churvan had led his family to safety when he remembered $153 in the society's funds, and his records of office. He and his son, John, 15, reentered the building. The father, trapped in his room, was burned to death. The boy escaped.

HOOVER LOOKS TO OCEAN TRIP AS BRIEF REST

Conferences With Island Officials to Be Sole Deviation.

FIRST LADY TO VISIT ILL SON IN ASHEVILLE

President to Leave Capital Wednesday or Thursday; Party to Be Small.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover was looking forward yesterday to a ten-day rest in the warm climate of the Caribbean Sea. He plans to sail from Norfolk Wednesday or Thursday on the battleship Arizona for a visit to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

With the exception of conferences on administrative problems with Govs. Theodore Roooosevelt, jr., of Porto Rico, and Paul M. Pearson, of the Virgin Islands, the trip will be devoted to rest and relaxation.

Mrs. Hoover will not accompany the President but will go to Asheville, N. C., to visit her son, Herbert Hoover, jr., who is recuperating from illness.

Hurley and Wilbur May Go.

Secretary Hurley, under whose supervision Porto Rico is governed, and possibly Secretary Wilbur, who has charge of the Virgin Islands, will accompany the President. Lawrence Richey, a White House secretary, probably will be the only other official member of the party.

Immediately after returning to Washington the President will turn his attention to preparing eight speeches he is scheduled to make between April 13 and June 17. He will open the annual meeting of the Red Cross on the 13th; on the 14th, address a Pan-American Union meeting here; May 4, speak before the International Chamber of Commerce in Washington, and on May 25, speak to the Red Cross again as part of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of that organization.

On May 30, Memorial Day, he will speak at Valley Forge, Pa., where Washington and his army suffered intense hardship during the Revolutionary War.

Speeches in Three States.

The other three speeches will carry him into three States in as many days. On June 15, he will address the Indiana Republican Editorial Association at Indianapolis; the following day he will dedicate the Harding Memorial at Marion, Ohio, and on the 17th he will dedicate the Lincoln Tomb at Springfield, Ill.

The Arizona will carry President Hoover South on her first trip after a year in drydock being reconditioned. She must have at least ten days' trial run at sea before being placed back into active service.

The ship was scheduled to sail on Tuesday, but the trial will be postponed as President Hoover has a dinner engagement at the White House that night. He will go by train to Norfolk Wednesday or Thursday to board her.

This week's trip will be the second time Mr. Hoover has turned southward since assuming office. He spent seven days fishing in Florida waters a year ago.

Trip Planned Some Time.

As President-elect, Mr. Hoover made an extensive good-will trip through South and Central America, but at the time was unable to visit the Caribbean. He has been planning a trip to the American possessions in that area for some time.

Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands are the country's most important insular possessions in the Caribbean. Porto Rico was acquired from Spain after the Spanish-American War, and the Virgin Islands were purchased from Denmark.

Until recently the Virgin Islands were under Navy Department control. President Hoover transferred them to

Lingle Trial Expected To Air Secrets Today

Reporter's Murder Case to Begin With State's Moves Undefined.

Chicago, March 15 (A.P.).—The Lingle murder case moved toward a courtroom denouement tonight still clothed in the secrecy which has made it a thing apart in Chicago crimeland annals. In this city, where clues and charges ordinarily are laid before the public posthaste, the trial of Leo V. Brothers for the slaying of Reporter "Jake" Lingle will open tomorrow morning as a unique contrast.

For not an inkling of the basis for charges against the cold-eyed St. Louis gangster has been revealed by the staff of investigators detailed to track down the man who killed Lingle in a Michigan boulevard subway last June.

Last-minute preparations for the trial saw this secrecy unbroken, despite a bitter wrangle between inquisitive defense lawyers and close-mouthed State prosecutors.

Court rules required that the State submit in advance the names of its witnesses. Defense attorneys at a meeting of counsel yesterday protested the list thus far submitted by the State.

It claimed to have heard that C. L. Applegate, New Orleans race horse owner, whose name was not listed, had been questioned and brought to Chicago as a State "ace." The State had no comment.

Under the agreement, it will be possible for the State to augment its group of suprise moves—first of which was the arrest of Brothers, December

LEO BROTHERS.

21, as "the man who fired the shot which killed Lingle"—by producing new witnesses in court during the jury's absence and outlining to the defense and judge the character of their testimony.

The defense plans to take advantage of two anomalous situations created by early investigation of the case. Frankie Foster, a former Moran-Aiello-Zuta gangster, first was arrested and held under a technical indictment for the slaying. It was charged that he was seen fleeing from the scene, and a revolver used in the killing was traced to him.

Later Frank Bell, now in the county jail under death sentence for another

Rocket Using Liquid Fuel Is Controlled by Inventor

Dessau, Germany, March 15 (A.P.). Johanne Winkler, German rocket inventor, has startled projectile enthusiasts here with a new device which permits a rocket to be controlled from the take-off to the point of landing. "Rocketeers" assert previous mechanisms of the sort have always flown wild, and never before have been accurately fired with a definite landing prearranged.

Tests, which Winkler continues here, were made yesterday, demonstrating the strange looking projectile, which is propelled by liquod fuel.

It was also said that liquid fuel never before had been used successfully in a rocket. The eerie device has a length of 28 inches and a diameter of 19 inches and is propelled by a combination explosive having liquid oxygen and gasolipe as basic materials.

Winkler calculated a wide arc with an extreme height of 3,000 feet and 660 feet from starting point to landfall. In yesterday's experiment he fixed the points carefully and set off his miniature messenger of the skies with electrical impulses.

The rocket zoomed for half a minute in its prescribed arc, and fell exactly on its charted course. It was demolished, as the inventor had not progressed far enough in his experiments to provide landing gear, and had not planned a safe landing.

This, he presumably will tackle in later experiments, having demonstrated to his own satisfaction that a rocket with greater propelling efficiency and more accurate steerability has been accomplished. Too, he believes, his liquid fuel will intimately mean greater capacity, longer flight and less impediments in the form of solid discharge.

Wrecked Men Bluff Pirates As Surf Cuts Off Escape

Hongkong, March 15 (A.P.).—An amazing tale of bluffing a horde of China coast pirates during a week in which they were refugees on Turnabout Island, in the Straits of Formosa, was related here tonight by the crew of the Norwegian freighter Roseville.

The crew of 35 men and officers arrived tonight aboard a tug sent in answer to the Roseville's distress calls after she struck submerged rocks off the island, March 6, while sailing to Amoy in a dense fog. The Roseville, a new, 9,000-ton freighter, on her second voyage to the Orient, was abandoned as a total loss. She left Seattle February 5.

Officers and men were thrown from bunks when the vessel jammed against the rocks. Efforts to free the vessel were unavailing, and with daybreak a cable was shot to the shore, 50 yards away, the cable settling over a tree.

A pulley was attached, and over this cable every man, loaded with what food he could carry, was transported to safety while thundering seas pounded the shore and helpless ship.

For a week the crew lived on Turnabout Island awaiting help and watching the ship being battered by merciless seas. Soon after their arrival hundreds of rough-looking natives, members of the world-known China coast pirate gangs, whose hideout is on Turnabout Island, appeared. The pirates started determined efforts to board the Roseville both from the land side and from boats. Remonstrance failed to have any effect on the buccaneers and officers fired pistols over the heads of the sea wolves. They retreated temporarily.

Thereafter armed guards from the

Calvin Coolidge Says:

One development after another emphasizes the growing self-sufficiency of Canada. At the opening of Parliament, when the action of Chief Justice Lyman P. Duff represented King George in the absence of the new Govenor General, the Earl of Bessborough, the speech from the throne was delivered for the first time by a Canadian.

The spectacle must have touched the pride of the people of the flourishing and resourceful dominion. It was a recognition of their increasing importance in the empire. A proposal has been made to have a Governor General who is a Canadian citizen. No doubt that will come. It would be natural for a country of ten millions of people, with a per capita wealth above that of the United States, to supply its own contact with the crown.

Politically Canada looks to England. Economically she looks to us. We have invested there about one-ninth of her national wealth while England has about one-fourteenth. Her trade with us is three times larger than her trade with the United Kingdom. Her own foreign investments are large. She has financial interests all over the Western Hemisphere. Because we represent the same economic aims we rejoice in the success of Canada.

Plans for Entertainment Await Itinerary Details

San Juan, Porto Rico, March 15 (A.P.).—Announcement of President Hoover's projected visit to Porto Rico came as a surprise here, although it was generally known he had intended coming eventually and had promised Governor Theodore Roosevelt he would make the trip at the first opportunity.

Although the visit is primarily to give the President a rest, there already is much discussion regarding the program for his entertainment. No definite plans can be made, however, until the time of his arrival and the length of his stay are known.

Theodore Roosevelt was the only President to visit Porto Rico. That was in 1906 when he came on the Battleship Louisiana, en route from the Panama Canal. Mrs. Roosevelt was with him then and she has several times visited their son since he became governor of the island.

Company Will Broadcast Hoover's Eight Speeches

President Hoover's eight scheduled addresses will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Co. to the people of the United States, it was announced last night.

Four of these addresses will be made in Washington and microphones of the NBC will follow the President to Valley Forge, Indianapolis, Marion and Springfield, Ill., points of origin of the other speeches.

To date President Hoover has faced microphones 39 times since taking office, exceeding by two the record of President Coolidge. Broadcasting of the Chief Executive's eight talks this spring will bring his total number of radio appearances to 47.

Factions Promise Peace for Peru

Junta Forces Allegiance of Northern and Southern Revolutionists.

Lima, Peru, March 15 (A.P.).—Peru appeared on the brink of peace today, when the southern military forces at the Arequipa garrison telegraphed they would support the Lima junta headed by David Samanez Ocampo. The nation has been shaken by a series of revolutions, which caused a change of government three times in a fortnight.

The reconciliation came about early after the Lima government had dispatched the cruiser Bolognesi late yesterday toward Mollendo, the seaport for Arequipa, to enforce a blockade which had been placed on the port. The junta, in sending the vessel south, said it was taking necessary steps to reach a favorable agreement in negotiations with the southerners.

While the garrison at Cuzco was not included officially in the agreement, Telegrams received by Lima officers from their colleagues there stated the Cuzco forces had accepted the authority of Lieut. Col. Gustavo Jimenez as secretary of war from the first, but had not been able so to declare owing to the strict censorship there.

DRY LAW BLAMED FOR INCOME TAXES

Curran Says Modification in 1930 Would Have Put $882,000,000 in Till.

(Associated Press.)

An attack upon prohibition as necessitating payment of income taxes by 2,000,000 American tax payers was made yesterday by Henry H. Curran, president of the association against the prohibition amendment.

Curran estimated in a statement that had the eighteenth amendment been repealed a year ago the Government would be the recipient of internal revenues this year on wine, beer and spirits of $882,000,000. He contended this would have allowed personal income tax payments of $2 for every $10 now paid.

At the same time, a statement was issued by the Congressional Districts Modification League holding any final action toward repeal by the next Congress as a "supremely unlikely event," and urging a drive for modification as a more ready eventuality.

More Revenue Seen.

Curran argued that in addition to the saving of 80 per cent of all personal income taxes, repeal of the dry laws would bring in additional revenues to wet States "from their own properly controlled liquor systems."

"As things are now," he said, "all of this possible revenue goes in the pockets of the bootleggers, gunmen, racketeers and their highly organized employes, except for such part of it as goes to prohibition agents and the police in graft and bribes."

He contended further the four States of Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Illinois, which he described as wet, are now paying 58 per cent of the total revenue from personal income tax.

Cost Laid to Opponents.

"The States which are most clamorous in support of prohibition," Curran asserted, "do not shoulder the cost of the noble experiment. That bill is charged against the States whose citizens are opposed to Volsteadism."

The Modification League said it proposed to place before the next Congress a petition carrying 20,000,000 names of those favoring modification.

"It is easy to understand," the statement said, "that the hope of 'repealers' for the early repeal or amendment of the amendment which is so obnoxious to the 'wets' has no background promising early fruition of that hope."

It cited the recent meeting of Democratic leaders here as an example of the split in that party over repeal, and asserted the Republican leaders also lacked "perfect harmony" on this score.

Palm Leaf Leads To Murder Clew

Fungus on Coat of Virginia Brooks Traced to House Near Her Home.

San Diego, March 15 (A.P.).—A tiny bit of palm leaf fungus may lead officers to the criminal who murdered Virginia Brooks. The scrap of a palm leaf, found adhering to the brown plaid coat, worn by the girl when she dropped from sight February 11 and still around the body when it was recovered five days ago on Camp Kearny Mesa, was analyzed today by Rex Welch, Los Angeles criminologist. Within a few hours police had singled out a house, not more than 3 or 4 miles from the Brooks home, where this particular variety of palm grows.

The house was admittted by police once to have been the residence of a man who was questioned in the Brooks case soon after the girl's disappearance.

His actions from the time the little girl disappeared until after the body was found are being checked. His name was not announced. The particular type of palm fungus discovered with the body of Virginia was said by Welch to be rare.

Mayor Thompson Hits King George

G. O. P. Candidate Names Cermak as Pawn for George's Backer.

Chicago, March 15 (A.P.).—King George is back in the Chicago political campaign. Mayor William Hale Thompson, who introduced his majesty's name into the race four years ago, brought it forth again in a speech today.

He charged that Anton J. Cermak, his Democratic opponent, is being used as a pawn for the international banking ambitions of Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National Bank of Chicago.

"If Cermak is elected," he added, "he would make Traylor a most powerful ally of the King of England, which would be to the detriment of the American people."

MEDALS FOR ESSAY CONTEST

"Old Glory" Medal, left, to be presented to each of the 22 contestants representing their junior and senior public high schools here in the "Envoy of Friendship" essay competition. Woman Arises in Coffin 3 Hours Before Burial

Santiago, Chile, March 15 (A.P.). A dispatch to La Nacion from Los Angeles in the Province of Biobio said a 22-year-old woman, who apparently had been dead for two days and nights, "came to life" today in her coffin, thereby escaping burial alive by three hours.

A physician said the young woman, Miss Acuna Castillo, suffered from a case of prolonged catalepsy. He added she undoubtedly would have revived in the coffin had she been buried.

The families and friends of the woman had neared the end of the period of mourning when she moved her arms and head and opened her tightly closed lips. In a quiet voice she then said, "Please give me a glass of water."

Smith was charged with shooting with intent to kill and is being held for the action of the grand jury which convenes today. The prisoner said he believed he was being held up and shot at the man near the car, whom he did believe was an officer. The girl was not detained.

Police said that Smith came to this city several months ago. He was given a hearing yesterday before Justice of the Peace A. C. Ritchie, who ordered him held for grand jury action.

"Roberts just opened the door and fired, without saying a word. He just lost his head," the sheriff said.

Three young Wilmington girls, passengers on the mail truck, were held as material witnesses. Their names were not revealed. Both Starling and Roberts lived in Wilmington with their families.

Morris explained that the three young girl passengers on the mail truck, Betty Gibson, Dorothy Jackson and Elizabeth Hines, all in their early twenties, were held as material witnesses until the inquest late today.

Spanish Revolt 'Trick,' Say Rebels

Attorneys Defending 77 on Trial Blames 2 Dead Officers for Deeds.

Jaca, Huesca, Spain, March 15 (A.P.).—Attorneys defending the 77 military men being tried here for participating in last December's revolution attempt, contended today that the prisoners were "tricked" into joining the movement, and never were sympathetic.

The attorneys maintain that Capt. Garcia Hernandez and Capt. Fernyn Galan took responsibility before they were executed.

Capt. Galan also was said to have stirred up dissension in Jaca. It was denied that Gonzales Galicia, one of the five for whom the prosecution has asked a death sentence, had fired on Gen. Lasheras, as charged.

Sir Samuel Hoare Sees Gyro as Airplane Taxi

New York, March 15 (A.P.).—The day when air taxis will carry passengers from railroad stations to the landing fields of air liners was visioned by Sir Samuel Hoare, former British secretary of state for air, in a radio broadcast from London today.

In this connection, he said, he centered his hopes in the autogyro, a windmill type of airplane, which rises almost vertically.

youth educational movement in the cause of Americanism and world peace."

Mrs. Loose, prominent in social and philanthropic circles, gladly accepted the invitation of the United States Flag Association to be patroness for the Washington boy and girl selected for the trip, bearing their expenses for every detail. She has asked The Washington Post, as a part of its community service, to assist in the selection of the boy and girl to make the trip.

Every boy and girl enrolled in either a senior or junior public high school in the District of Columbia is eligible for this trip, if between the ages of 14 and 18 years. They must be of high moral character, manifest intelligence, sound health, good personality and satisfactory scholastic standing.

Essays Will Be Basis.

An essay not exceeling 200 words on the subjects, "The Typical American Boy," for boys, and "The Typical American Girl," for girls, must be submitted by each applicant, one boy and one girl being chosen from each school as a result of this test. Additional tests will be held April 11 and April 18 to determine the preliminary and the final winners and each preliminary winner will be awarded the "Old Glory" medal of the United States Flag Association, while the "Envoys" selected will receive the Cross of Honor of the Flag Association, which confers life membership in the "Order of The Flag," headed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as the first man to receive this medal, which has also been awarded to Calvin Coolidge.

The Washington boy and girl selected for the patriotic pilgrimage and goodwill trip to Europe will be members of a party of "Envoys of Friendship," sponsored by the United States Flag Association, who will receive unusual honors and distinctions in both London and Paris, being received by either the King of England or the Prince of Wales in London, and by the President of France. In addition, they will participate in goodwill mass meetings with the children of both countries at which speeches, made by boys and girls, will be sent back by radio and broadcast over the United States on a nation-wide hook-up.

Post To Carry Details.

Further details of the contest will be carried in The Washington Post exclusively from day to day.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the plan of the United States Flag Association for the furtherance of world friendship was conceived by a military man, Col. James A. Moss, U. S. A. Retired, a West Point graduate who fought in three wars and has written more military books, thirty-seven in number, than any other author that ever lived. From telling men how to kill other men in war, and because he knows at first hand the horrors of sufferings of war and its sickening results, Col. Moss, now President General of the United States Flag Association, has dedicated the rest of his life to striving for the establishment of permanent peace among the nations of the world.

L and N Has Jail Car To Transport Prisoners

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 15 (A.P.). The mobile age is asserting itself even in jail styles.

The first "coach-jail" in the world is claimed by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. It has capacity for about 100 persons, whose egress would be restrained by steel barred doors and windows. Its first duty as a portable bastile was in transporting Federal prisoners from Frankfort, Ky., to the Atlanta Federal Prison.

RESTIVE PRISONERS JEER PROBE GROUP

Boos and Curses Are Heard as Illinois Convicts Sulk After Riot.

Joliet, Ill., March 15 (A.P.).—An aura of unrest rung over the Illinois State Penitentiary today.

Sequel to the short-lived uprising in which one convict was killed and three others wounded, it found an outlet in boos and curses at a special legislative committee which rushed to survey the situation.

Machine guns, trained from the frowning gray walls of the antiquated prison, kept order within the inclosure, where yesterday noon there was turmoil and the sharp bark of rifles.

But as the legislators, appointed originally to investigate the death "in solitary" of Convict Joseph Coakley, started through the cell blocks bedlam broke out. Inmates shrieked invectives and hissed derisively.

The mysterious prison "grapevine," by which news is passed from convict to convict, was believed by officials to have spread tidings of the unrest to the new Stateville Prison, across the town. The guard was augmented there.

In nearby cities the Illinois National Guard was on call, ready to rush troops in event of another outbreak.

The disappearance of butcher knives, meat choppers, table knives and other kitchen utensils from the kitchen and mess hall, wrecked by the prisoners yesterday, gave added cause for concern. It was pointed out they must be hidden in various cells, to be used in event of another riot.

Representative Roger Little, of Champaign, chairman of the legislative committee, said he would call another meeting Tuesday in Springfield to formulate plans for an immediate and thorough investigation at Joliet next Thursday.

Prisoners Will Testify.

At that time it is planned to take testimony from the prison authorities, the guards and the prisoners.

The committee, which, in addition to Little, is composed of M. E. Bray, of Litchfield; William G. Thon and Michael Igoe, of Chicago, and Harry McCaskrin, of Rock Island, spent most of the day in conference with Warden Henry C. Hill, Director Rodney H. Brandon, of the State Department of Public Welfare, and Col. Frank Whipp, State superintendent of prisons. There was an hour's secret session, from which no news came.

"We intend," Little said, "to determine, if possible, the cause of the riot so as to later make recommendations to prevent a repetition."

Representative McCaskrin added the committee might want to look into the effect of the mutiny upon the State board of pardons and paroles.

Some Releases Intimated.

"It has been intimated," he asserted, "that the parole board might exercise its power and release some of these men. I think some of them have been here too long."

The 1,100 convicts who participated in the riot and the other 600 inmates were compelled to do without food because of the wrecked kitchen until noon today. Those who did not mutiny were marched in a bread line under heavy guard into an improvised mess hall. Efforts were being made to feed the others in their cells.

Mrs. Richardson, 87, Hurt by Auto

Assistant Attorney General's Mother Near Death From Injuries.

Mrs. Electa Richardson, 87 years of age and mother of Seth W. Richardson, Assistant Attorney General, is in a serious condition at Emergency Hospital, where she was taken when she was knocked down by an automobile said to have been driven by Henry W. Heine, 38 years old, of Twenty-eighth street northwest, near Calvert street. The mishap occured, Heine said, at the intersection of Livingston street and Connecticut street, when Mrs. Richardson stepped from behind a parked automobile.

He placed the woman in his automobile and took her to the hospital. Mrs. Richardson told physicians that she was on her way to church. The woman suffered a compound fracture of the leg, possible fracture of the pelvis, lacerations of the scalp and shock. She may not recover.

Heine was booked at the Fourteenth Precinct Station on a charge of reckless driving and released on bond of $1,000.

Los Angeles, March 15 (A.P.).—James Neill, 70, veteran actor of the stage and screen, died here today. He was stricken with a heart ailment two weeks ago.

Neill was on the legitimate stage 28 years before beginning motion picture work. At one time he was head of his own stock company, which played mainly in Cincinnati, Ohio; St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., and Winnipeg, Canada. He went on the stage first in New York in 1883. One of his first major roles was the lead in "The Senator," produced by William H. Crane.

The last motion picture in which he appeared was "Man to Man," but prior to that he had roles as the Apostle James in "King of Kings," and Aaron in "The Ten Commandments."

Inland Waterways Show Huge Profit

Government-Operated River System, Report Shows, Totals $65,177.09.

(Associated Press.)

The Inland Waterways Corporation, controlling the vast activities of the Government-operated river transportation system, produced a net profit for 1930 nearly as large as its loss during the preceding year.

Despite decreased river levels, due to the drought and general business depression, Maj. Gen. Thomas G. Ashburn, chairman of the corporation, will report to Secretary Hurley a net income of $65,177.09 for 1930, as compared with a loss of $72,798.02 in 1929.

Simultaneously, he will advise the Secretary the corporation now has $7,000,000 on hand for further expansion of its 2,500-mile transportation system. The next expansion, Ashburn said last night, will open the Illinois River for navigation as far as Peoria, Ill., July 1. The general predicted commerce would be moving to Kansas City, Mo., on the Missouri River, by 1932.

Industrial Flour Avoids Depression

Unemployment Shows All Mills Have Run Steadily Despite Slump.

(Associated Press.)

The flour milling industry has been able to avoid almost completely unemployment among its workers in the past year, despite the depression.

Reporting to the President's emergency committee for employment, George Livingston, executive vice president of the Millers National Federation of Chicago, found some evidence that consumption of flour had been stimulated rather than reduced during recent months.

"This industry, producing, as it does, a standard staple, the consumption of which is likely to increase slightly during a depression of this kind, does not change materially the number of men employed from year to year," he added. "Some local unemployment may exist due to plant changes, but no lay-offs are traceable to the general depression. Millers have added to their pay roll wherever possible."

97 U. S. Ships Sold By Board in Year

(Associated Press.)

A survey made public yesterday by the board said the Government fleet of ocean vessels of 1,000 tons gross or more was reduced during the year by 97 ships, totaling 486,747 tons gross.

This was achieved by sale to American owners by scrapping and by transfer to foreign registry of ships whose new owners undertake to use them in non-American trade only.

The privately owned section of the American Merchant Marine increased last year by 27 vessels and 241,150 gross tons, or 3.5 per cent in tonnage. More than three-fourths of the ocean-going merchant marine of the United States is now in private hands.

TEACHERS COLLEGE PLANS FOR MAY DAY

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 16.—Arrangements are rapidly being made for the greatest May Day celebration ever held at the Harrisonburg State Teachers College. The committe in charge of this annual fete has been at work since January. The celebration has usually been held the first week in May. This year the entire afternoon of May 15 will be devoted to a colorful and extensive pageant. The belated date is caused by May 15 being the day on which the new Administration Building will be opened and formally dedicated. A record attendance is expected. Many notables in Virginia and adjoining States have already accepted the invitation to be present and to participate in the exercises.

A large number of the alumnae of the college will also be present since the Alumnae Association of the College has appointed this day as their annual home-coming. Contracts have been signed for a joint recital of Richard Crooks, noted tenor, and Albert Spalding, violinist. We are anticipating a large crowd to attend the May Day pageant which will be held at the amphitheater.

Arrangements are being made with the foremost amplification company to install the most improved system of electrical amplification and to furnish a professional announcer and occassional music.

Miss Edna Shaeffer, head of the department of music, announces that the twenty-piece college orchestra will be augmented upon invitation by some of the most outstanding musicians of the valley. The orchestra will play in symphonic arrangement for several affairs of that day.

TRIAL IN MURDER OF LINGLE TO OPEN

crime, made a voluntary confession that he participated in Lingle's killing. He named Richard Sullivan, also awaiting death, as the actual slayer.

Defense attorneys said both the indictment of Foster and the confession of Bell would be presented to the jurors, regardless of their authenticity. Legally, they held, both cases must be considered.

Prosecution Keeps Secret.

What the prosecution had in mind remained a secret. From the nature of the investigation, however, it was believed that before the celebrated case rests with the jury the names and records of gangland's noted figures—living and dead—will be revealed.

Such men as Jack Zuta, Joe Aiello, Patsy Tardi and Frankie Mario, all North Side gangsters, have been linked by theory with the killing of Lingle. They are all dead—victims of underworld assassins.

Mario was the last to die. A few weeks before his body was plucked from a New York gutter, he had been questioned by Pat Roche, chief of the Lingle investigators. The arrest of Brothers followed that trip of Roche to New York.

MAROONED SAILORS HOLD OFF PIRATES

greatly outnumbered group of refugees kept constant vigilance, dozens of times driving back the bandits who retreated only when the seamen threatened to shoot to kill. Armed conflict might possibly have been fatal to all of the tiny band. Weary days passed and finally a tugboat from Hongkong appeared.

Divers examined the stricken vessel and reported she was wedged hard and fast on the jagged rocks with huge gashes ripped in her sides. She was gradually sinking and her decks were awash.

Unable to save the ship, the tug gathered up the refugees and returned, leaving the freighter to the mercy of pirates. A Japanese salvage tug arriving later found the Roseville swarming with pirates who were stripping her cargo and fittings.

C. M. T. C. TO REACH 5,500 IN THIRD AREA

Previous Records Are Passed in Enrollment for Year Against 2,969 in 1930.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, March 15.—With the total number of applicants for enrollment in the Citizens Military Training Camps, of the Third Corps Area, for the coming summer already exceeding 5,500, all previous records for young men seeking training at these camps bid fair to be broken this year, according to officers in charge of C. M. T. C. affairs at Third Corps Area headquarters.

The procurement campaign opened March 1 and this year's registration may be favorably compared with last year's when only 2,969 had made application up to March 17. Camps will be conducted from July 2 to 31. Location, quotas and types of training are as follow: Fort Washington, Md., 800 Infantry; Fort Howard, Md., 600 Infantry; Fort Eustis, Va., 900 Infantry; Fort George G. Meade, Md., 650 Infantry and 250 Signal Corps; Fort Monroe, Va., 450 Coast Artillery Corps; Fort Hoyle, Md., 450 Field Artillery; Fort Myer, Va., 250 Cavalry.

Pennsylvania districts lead all others in number of applicants. Although budget allotments fix the number to be trained in this corps area at 4,600, based upon past experience a total of 6,000 applicants will be accepted.

Cavalry and Coast Artillery prove most attractive in the percentages of applicants seeking specialized training. Emphasis is laid more on citizenship training and physical development of the young men attending camps than upon the military phases, officers in charge point out. Citizenship studies are given an important place in the instruction with boxing, baseball, swimming and track sports having a prominent place in the general program for promoting the mental, moral and physical development of students.

Coroner Satisfied Simms Killed Self

Thoroughly satisfied with the coroner's jury finding of suicide in the death of Frank Lee Simms, Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt yesterday, in the face of adverse criticism from members of the man's family, declined to reopen the case.

Meanwhile, arrangements were completed for the funeral at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Baptist Temple on King street in Alexandria, with the Rev. Ryland T. Dodge, pastor, officiating. Assisting will be the Rev. John S. Sowers, of the Del Ray Baptist Church.

The 28-year-old bakery salesman, of 1021 Duke street in Alexandria, last was seen by friends and relatives when he left home at 4:45 o'clock Saturday morning to drive to work in Washington. Investigation led to discovery of the man's body floating in the Potomac River about midway between the Highway and railroad bridges in about 4 feet of water. No marks of violence were found on the body. An autopsy revealed, according to Dr. A. Magruder McDonald, that water found in the lungs showed clearly that the man had drowned. Simms' machine was found parked on the Highway Bridge.

A Grown-up Store Serves You More Intimately

It seems like an odd contradiction to say that the more customers A & P has, the more intimately it can serve each one of them. Yet it's a fact.

The original little store from which A & P sprang was stocked with carefully bought food. But after all, it was a small store, and it had to buy what the market offered.

The grown-up A & P of today is stocked with food whose selection takes the full time of hundreds of buyers, scattered across the face of the earth, searching wherever good foods originate for the pick of the crop. So it is that when you express a desire for a certain type of food, a specialist in that food knows where to find it at the peak of quality, for the lowest price.

The A & P store in your neighborhood, backed by an army of expert buyers, carries out your wishes as the little old original store never dreamed of doing.

CAPT. HENRY PAUL DIES AT AGE OF 80

Served Navy as Astronomer From 1875 to 1897; Rites Set for Wednesday.

Capt. Henry Martyn Paul, United States Navy, retired, who performed important astronomical work for the Government as assistant astronomer at the United States Naval Observatory, died at noon yesterday at the Ontario.

Capt. Paul, who was 80 years old, had been in failing health since breaking his hip in a fall from a street car just before Christmas, 1924.

Capt. Paul was appointed assistant astronomer at the Naval Observatory in 1875, after graduating from the Thayer School of Civil Engineering with the degree of civil engineer. He served in this position for five years, and was then appointed professor of astronomy in the Imperial University, Tokyo, Japan. He is believed to have been the first man to have introduced the study of astronomy in a Japanese institution of learning.

Conducted Vibration Tests.

Returning to Washington in 1883, Capt. Paul resumed his duties at the Naval Observatory, serving continuously until 1899. In 1897, he was commissioned in the Corps of Professors of Mathematics of the United States Navy.

When the new Naval Observatory was planned, Capt. Paul conducted experiments and tests for vibration from traffic at all available sites. His work led to the selection of the present site of the observatory.

He then served for six years in the Bureau of Yards and Docks. During this time he was senior member of a special board to recommend plans for the modernization and centralization of power plants at the navy yards. In 1905 he was ordered to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, where he taught mathematics until shortly before his retirement from active service in 1913.

Wrote Many Pamphlets.

Capt. Paul was the author of numerous astronomical pamphlets included in the publications of the Naval Observatory. For many years he sang in the choir of the First Congregational Church, of which he was a member for more than 50 years. Later he was precentor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church for a number of years. He was president of the Choral Society of Washington from 1896 to 1898 and continued to be financial secretary of the Choral Society for five years longer.

He was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of the Washington Academy of Sciences and of the Philosophical Society of Washington. He was a member of the Cosmos Club.

In 1878 Capt. Paul married Augusta Anna Gray, daughter of the Rev. Edgar H. Gray, who was chaplain of the Senate during the administration of President Lincoln. He is survived by his son, Carroll Paul, of Marquette, Mich., lieutenant commander (C. E. C.), United States Navy, and by his sister, Mrs. Oliver H. Howe, of Cohasset, Mass. His nephew, Richard F. Paul, of Canton, Mass., is commander of the Massachusetts department of the American Legion.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, from the chapel of John R. Wright, 1337 Tenth street northwest. Burial will be at Arlington Cemetery.

Melville Stone Honored in Rites

Hudson, Ill., Holds Service for Deceased Famous Newspaper Man.

Hudson, Ill., March 15 (A.P.).—This little village, the birthplace of Melville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press from 1893 until 1918, today honored the famous newspaper man.

At a community meeting J. L. Hasbrouck, editor of the Bloomington Pantagraph, reviewed the life of Mr. Stone, who was born at Hudson, August 22, 1848, the son of a Methodist minister.

This village knew the Stone family for only two years. In his own life story, published prior to his death, Mr. Stone said the first home he knew was when his father lived at Nauvoo, the Illinois home of Mormonism. The family later moved to Chicago, where young Melville became a news carrier, reporter and, finally, founder of the Chicago daily.

COUSIN OF LINCOLN IS DEAD IN VIRGINIA

Dr. J. E. Lincoln, 75, Lived in Colonial Neighborhood of Original Family.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 15.—Dr. John E. Lincoln, 75 years old, one of the few remaining old-time Virginia country physicians, a cousin of President Abraham Lincoln and a great-great-grandson of "Virginia John" Lincoln, who established the Lincoln family in Rockingham County about 1760, died today.

Dr. Lincoln bore marked characteristics to the martyred President, his cousin. He was tall, angular, slender and possessed the Abraham Lincoln faculty of expressing himself in pointed sentences.

His great-uncle, Abraham Lincoln, a captain in the Revolutionary army, migrated with the Virginia soldiers to take up land grants in Kentucky, offered as a bonus to those who fought for independence of the colonies. Capt. Abraham Lincoln took with him his son, Jonathan Lincoln, the father of the martyred President, and settled around Hodgenville. Near there Capt. Abraham Lincoln was killed by the Indians.

Lincoln's Visit Recalled.

Dr. Lincoln's grandfather, David Lincoln, entertained Abraham Lincoln in the early forties when he was en route to Washington from Illinois, after being elected to Congress. David Lincoln in those days kept a tavern at what is now known as Lacey Spring, and the martyred President stopped there overnight, renewing his acquaintances with his Virginia relatives.

Dr. J. E. Lincoln was born in this tavern, the son of A. B. Lincoln, a farmer and son of David Lincoln. Dr. Lincoln's family were sympathizers of the South in the Civil War. His father was a Methodist and a fighting Democrat.

A short distance from Lacey Spring, where Dr. Lincoln was born and raised, is the old Lincoln burying ground, where rests the body of Virginia John Lincoln, the great-grandfather of the President. Nearby is the burying ground of the Lincoln-owned slaves. The Virginia members of the Lincoln family remaining in Virginia were slave owners.

Poverty Is Refuted.

Rockingham members of the Lincoln family, prosperous and substantial people, gave refutation to the long-believed idea that the Lincolns were "poor white trash." The old Lincoln homes on the Edom road north of Harrisonburg are among the most substatnial brick structures in Rockingham County. The doorways and mantlepieces are of beautiful hand-carved work. Two years ago descendants of Virginia John Lincoln sold the old Lincoln grandfather clock, several pieces of furniture and and hand-worked silverware for $15,000.

Dr. Lincoln was born in the old Lincoln Tavern at Lacey Spring in 1856. He graduated in medicine from Bellevue Medical College, N. Y., and after practicing a few years in West Virginia located at his old home near Lacey Spring, and three years ago he observed his fiftieth anniversary for continuous medical practice as a country physician.

He was president of the Rockingham Board of Health, and universally loved in Rockingham County. He was a Democratic leader and a warm supporter of Al Smith for President in 1928. He held pride in the achievements of his cousin, President Lincoln, but he never wavered in his devotion to the South and the Democratic party. A son, Dr. Asa Liggett Lincoln, practices in New York. His widow, formerly Miss Amanda Cline, of West Virginia, also survives.

Difficulties Confront States Under Redistricting Order

(Associated Press.)

Thirty-two States are confronted with the problem of redistricting both area and population under the new reapportionment law, and most of them are having plenty of trouble.

All have been officially notified of the new number of seats in the House of Representatives they are to have, beginning with the Seventy-third Congress. William Tyler Page, House clerk, sent notices to State secretaries immediately after the automatic law became effective at noon, March 4.

Twenty-one States lose 27 seats to eleven States under the law, based on the 1930 census, excluding Indians not taxed. Those losing seats are having more difficulty than those gaining, and incidentally, the political careers of at least a score of House members will be affected.

Those gaining also are having some trouble, but if they fail to redistrict before the 1932 elections, the additional members can run from the State at large. It may be necessary for members in losing States which fail to redistrict to run at large.

The new apportionment is the first since 1913, although the Constitution provides that House seats be reapportioned on the basis of each decennial census.

Congress failed to enact a reapportionment law in 1920, and succeeding years until the automatic law was passed in 1929, which provides that beginning with the Seventy-third Congress, which convenes in 1933, the seats be reapportioned every fifth Congress on the basis of decennial censuses.

Unsuccessful efforts were made to change the law in the recent Congress to provide for an increase in membership. The State Legislatures have before them the question of redistricting according to the new alignment as announced by President Hoover last November on the basis of census figures.

Under the new distribution, California gains 9 seats; Michigan, 4; Texas, 3; New Jersey, New York and Ohio, 2 each; and Connecticut, Florida, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Washington, 1 each.

Missouri leads the losing States with three, while Georgia, Iowa, Kentucky and Pennsylvania, drop one each. Alabama, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin lose one each.

Alabama has already solved its problem by throwing the Fifth and Seventh districts together into one district, which will force Representatives Patterson and Allgood, representing them, to run against each other in 1932. In some States members whose districts are to be abolished expect to retire, while in others friends of long standing will run against each other.

First U. S. Broadcast From Ireland Heard

New York, March 15 (A.P.).—The first radio program originating in Ireland to be broadcast in the United States, was heard over the National Broadcasting Network today, bringing a St. Patrick's Day message from William T. Cosgrave, president of the Irish Free State.

President Cosgrave, introduced by Frederick A. Sterling, United States Minister, outlined the economic development of his country and touched upon the Irish influence in promoting world peace.

GANDHI, IN SPEECH, DENIES HE IS DIVINE

Bombay, India, March 15 (A.P.).—While Mahatma Gandhi at Sisroda today was disclaiming the supernatural attributes some of his disciples see in him, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, influential congress party leader, exhorted a great audience here to be content with nothing short of complete independence.

A tremendous crowd listened to him. Half a dozen men were hurt when the loud speakers broke down and the mob stampeded toward the platform.

The pandit explained his version of complete independence as full control by Indians of the army, the administrative government and the nation's finances. Power, he said, must be transferred from England to the masses of India and not to a group of hand-picked Indians.

He urged his audience to retain "the mentality of war," ready to renew their active fight for independence.

"I am neither saint nor mahatma (a great soul)," he said, "but only a humble servant—a satyagrahi (one who practices soul force)."

This speech wound up a tour of the district where he began his civil disobedience campaign a year ago.

"You must not think me supernatural," he said. "I am common clay."

Catching sight of the policeman who arrested him here last year, Gandhi told him he was on his way again to make salt.

"And will you arrest me once again?" he asked.

"That all depends on what you say and what you do," the policeman replied.

Gandhi left tonight for Bombay. A great reception awaited him.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 15 (A.P.).—Two carloads of ancient machinery, collected by Henry Ford from the southwestern part of Florida for installation in his museum at Dearborn were en route north by train tonight.

Mr. Ford recently collected a number of sawmill engines and other equipment in nearby territory, in most cases installing new machinery for the units he took.

Tunis, Tunisia, March 15 (A.P.).—Walter E. Edge, American Ambassador to France, and Mrs. Edge, who are touring French North Africa, dined tonight with Gen. and Mme. De Chambrun, the latter the former Clara Longworth, of Cincinnati.

They were received on their arrival here this afternoon by Gen. Manceron and later motored to Sidi Bou to visit Baron D'Erlanger.

Put the Ford Truck on your pay-roll

Ford platform bodies and dump bodies are used extensively in highway building, general construction and excavation work. In addition Ford dump bodies are used for hauling coal, coke and garbage.

WHEREVER hauling-equipment is used or needed, Ford commercial units can be of service. They are strong, have a wide range of speed and power, and can readily be adapted to any specific use. There is a body-type for every purpose, and a choice of two different chassis, and three different wheelbases. Because of their low first cost, reliability, and low cost of operation, Ford units offer marked economy for any hauling-job.

Many features of the Ford add to its reliability, thus reducing the cost of maintenance, and increasing its economy. For example, each part is carefully studied to determine what specific steel will give it the longest life and best service. Some require tough steel; others extremely hard — so more than 40 different kinds of steel are used.

More than twenty ball and roller bearings are located at important points throughout the truck. In all forward speeds, the entire drive, from engine to wheels, is carried by these anti-friction bearings. Wear on many moving parts is thus reduced.

The value of these, and other features, becomes more evident as Ford units continue to give mile after mile of faithful service, seldom interrupted by the need for adjustments or repairs. Fords stay — and pay — on the job.

The Ford 1½-ton truck is available with either 131½-inch or 157-inch wheelbase. There is a choice of high or low rear-axle gear-ratios, of single or dual rear wheels, and of open or closed cabs. The light delivery-car, which has the same chassis as the Model A Ford car, can be equipped with bodies for every light hauling-purpose.

Your Ford dealer can show you a Ford unit that is adapted to the special requirements of your business.

TRADE INDICATORS ALL POINT UPWARD

Better Demand Is Reported for Steel, Textiles and Motors.

New York, March 15 (A.P.).—Business indicators of the past week continued to point upward, but the angle of inclination was moderate, and actual progress was not rapid.

The early date of Easter has been reflected in a better demand for textiles and shoes. Motor manufacturers are quickening output in keeping with the increased schedules which had been announced for March. The steel trade expresses some dissatisfaction with the volume of incoming business, but some further gains in production are anticipated this month.

As in the preceding week, however, surface indications are less impressive than the developments of longer term implications. The Department of Labor's report on employment in February showed about the expected seasonal increase over January, and a substantially larger than seasonal gain in factory pay rolls. A year ago, when almost every one was expecting quick return to boom times, February failed to show its normal gains.

Commodity Price Surveys.

For the second consecutive week, most of the commodity price surveys show more advances than declines. This is one of the most encouraging exhibits in the commodity price situation since the pronounced decline started in 1929. Conspicuous in lines showing firmer price trends were hides and leather.

Textiles eased off a little in spots, but that reflected primarily a reaction from a too rapid advance. Silver has made further recovery. Copper was reduced to 10 cents a pound, but the production statistics for February were mildly favorable, and there was soon no metal for sale at that low price.

The low level of corporate profits is a factor which has begun to weigh a little heavily upon the improved business sentiment. Carnegie Steel announced unchanged prices for heavy products for the second quarter, dashing hopes of some widening of the extremely narrow-profit margins with which the industry is now working.

General Business Sentiment.

This situation in industries generally has also been reflected in numerous adverse dividend announcements. Altogether, however, this aspect of the situation has been more depressing to Wall street than to general business sentiment. It has nevertheless, cut off the stimulating influence of a rising stock market.

One of the most conspicuous developments in the economic outlook in recent weeks has been the more cheerful attitude in leading foreign centers. For the fifth consecutive week now, European centers generally report improvement. While it is partly or wholly seasonal, as has been the domestic upturn, it at least indicates that the influences of world-wide depression are on the wane.

The petroleum industry is struggling with an extremely adverse price situation, and the latest production figures lend little hope for immediate improvement. At least, some progress is being made in Washington toward a voluntary agreement to restrict imports.

Stock Prices Influenced By Reductions in Dividends

New York, March 15 (A.P.).—Speculative Wall street was forced to recognize this week that the stream of corporate profits is still icebound.

The February bull market in stocks was primarily in recognition of the fact that the freezing process appeared to have been checked. Reduction of the dividend rate of one of the leading Eastern trunk-line railroads for the first time in a decade this week forcibly brought to Wall street's attention a fact of which it has been conscious, but has not liked to think about,—namely, that the thawing process is slow.

The cutting of New York Central's annual dividend rate from $8 to $6 demonstrated that no dividend rate is sacred. It is well known in banking circles that many major corporations are not earning their dividend requirements on the basis of present rates of payment, and in many conservative quarters, it is felt that continued distribution of payments from supplies is not known in keeping with prudent business policies.

Financial observers have been stating for some time that the late winter and spring would bring an assortment of adverse dividend announcements that would severely hamper bullish activity in the stock market.

In the past week, the bull leaders have mostly shipped their oars and been content to drift. The drift of prices has been slowly and uncertainly downward, for the third successive week. The most reassuring aspect of the situation has been the fact that since the passing of financial storm clouds back in December, there have been no storms of necessitous selling, and the skys remain comfortably clear.

Bulls are not too downhearted, for they feel that bearishness will be overdone, further dividend reductions will probably be less drastic than calamity howlers will have Wall street believe, that bearishness will consequently be overdone, and that a bear panic will eventually give the list another vigorous advance, which may be consolidated at a higher average level.

Again contributing toward the distinctly more favorable outlook as seen by the more patient observers has been the action of the bond market. New bonds in excess of $260,000,000 were floated this week, and all things considered, the listed bond market withstood the test fairly well. The lower New York Central dividend brought some selling into the second grade rail liens, but high-grade rail bonds, such as the Central issues, continued to attract good inquiry. Furthermore, the improved tone of foreign markets gave evidence of world-wide economic betterment, far reaching if slight.

Week Leaves Curb Mart in Deadlock

Bears and Bulls Average Even Score Throughout Light Seling.

New York, March 15 (A.P.).—Trading on the curb market has reached a virtual deadlock between the professional speculative elements. Bears took the play from the bull party during the final half of last week but ran into a steadily shrinking volume which encouraged covering in Saturday's session.

The market held fairly firm on Monday and Tuesday, but by Wednesday it was apparent that the news was not of a character to support bullish demonstrations and stocks were offered for sale in some quantity. Utilities made the best resistance but finally joined the downward movement which had been led by the oils. By Friday, however, the turnover was small enough to indicate that little stock was ready to come out.

Petroleum shares were depressed by the cuts in prices and the expansion in production, as well as by 1930 earnings, statements of some large companies. Although selling was not particularly heavy, the issues lacked support and several went to new lows for the bear market.

Flotations of New Bonds Set Weekly Record for '31

New York, March 15 (A.P.).—Although the advance in the bond market last week was far from uniform and, although the activity was not sensational at any time, there were a number of developments of more than ordinary interest. Offerings for the week aggregated $262,000,000, the largest weekly total this year.

The simultaneous flotation on Tuesday of $50,000,000 of bonds for the Pennsylvania Railroad and the $75,000,000 issue of the New York Central aroused widespread hope of a general revival of new financing. These two issues combined to make the largest daily total for corporate financing since the $230,000,000 joint offering in June, 1921, for the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific incident to the control of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. An issue of $68,000,000 of bonds of the Port of New York Authority was offered on Tuesday also.

The directors of the New York Central reduced the quarterly dividend from $2 to $1.50 on Wednesday. This action was interpreted as an indication of an unfavorable outlook for railroads generally and precipitated moderate selling of rail bonds, most of which closed the week lower.

Foreign obligations were consistently firm and net gains of several points fairly common. There is known to be a large volume of foreign financing awaiting favorable conditions in the American market. Consequently some bankers were too backward in hailing the upward movement in this group as an auspicuous sign.

Plans for the offering of $100,000,000 of bonds for the Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. are maturing. This issue will take the form of first and refunding mortgage 4½ per cent bonds due in 1960.

The Vanadium Corporation of America plans to issue $5,000,000 of ten-year 5 per cent sinking fund debentures to provide additional working capital. Southern California Gas Co. plans to retire a total of $8,160,000 of first mortgage 6 per cent bonds, including two issues on May 1 and June 1, respectively. Both issues will be redeemed at 105 and accrued interest.

Bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange on March 1 totaled 1,605 issues with an aggregate par value of $50,108,876. The respective comparative figures for March 1, 1930, were 1,543 and $49,250,457.

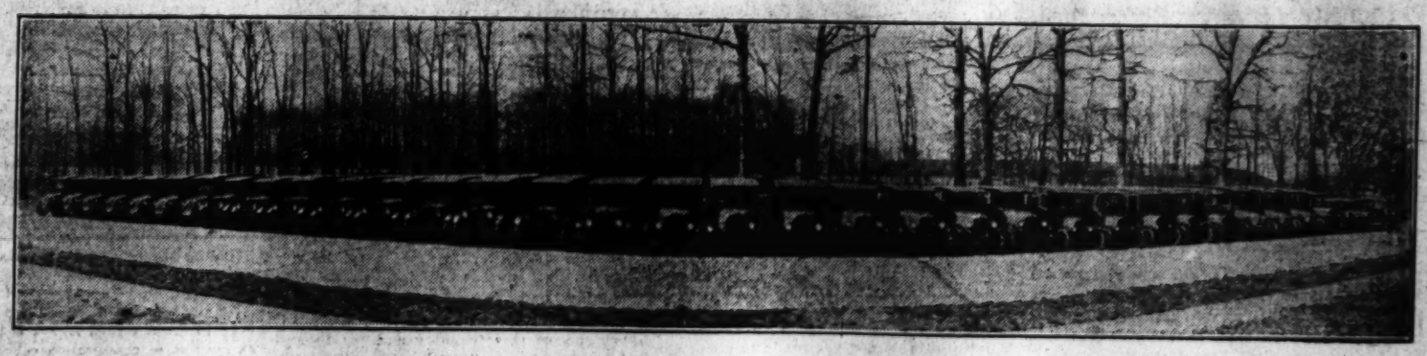
"I can truthfully state I like Amoco-Gas better than any other motor fuel"

-says JOHN W. LOWE, JR.
Vice-President and Treasurer, Manhattan Laundry



The trucks of the Manhattan Laundry are a familiar sight on Washington streets—34 of them are busily engaged in collecting and delivering the laundry bundles which keep 325 employees busily engaged.

Maintaining regular deliveries is one of the most important duties of a successful laundry—and that's why Mr. John W. Lowe, Jr., Vice-President and Treasurer of the Manhattan Laundry, has always been so keenly interested in the performance rendered by gasoline and motor fuels.

So, it's really the opinion of an expert and experienced buyer when Mr. Lowe says:

"I have been using Amoco-Gas for some time, and can truthfully say I like it better than any other motor fuel."

At any Amoco-Gas pump—you'll find the motor fuel that will bring you into full agreement with Mr. Lowe.

HOOVER IN THE CARIBBEAN.

President Hoover's visit to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands will turn public attention to those neglected stepchildren of the United States. Their residents are deserving of the better government and economic encouragement that are likely to result from the President's study of conditions.

Gov. Theodore Roosevelt has been active in promoting the welfare of Porto Rico, but he has been handicapped in many particulars. Overpopulation, the general depression, and the devastation wrought by the hurricane of 1928 have created complex problems which are too difficult for the island government to solve unaided. Congress has been indifferent to the demands for remedial legislation. The desire for a greater measure of self-determination is fanned by native politicians who hope to take advantage of any concessions on the part of Washington. The quality of "politics" in Porto Rico is decidedly poor. Gov. Roosevelt finds difficulty in obtaining efficient personnel, either native or American. But he has made progress, nevertheless, in improving rural conditions and in establishing schools, hospitals, &c. Probably the conference between President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt will result in administrative changes of great benefit to the island, and Congress may be induced to pay attention to needed legislation.

The state of affairs in the Virgin Islands is even worse than in Porto Rico. An experiment in social and political economy is to be undertaken by the new regime headed by Gov. Paul M. Pearson. He has lately gone to the islands with a staff of enthusiastic workers, largely drawn from universities, and an attempt is to be made to work out a scheme of economic development. The islands formerly fared well in manufacturing rum and purveying to shipping, but the Volstead act applied in all its rigor has destroyed the rum industry and the substitution of oil for coal has done away with the activity of St. Thomas as a port of call for steamships. If Gov. Pearson and his corps of academic specialists can discover and develop a central industry for the Virgin Islands they will earn a high place in the annals of insular administrations. The attractions of the Virgin Islands in climate, scenery, and healthful diversion are such as to warrant the hope that Americans will establish winter homes there and thus build up local enterprises.

While President Hoover's itinerary is confined to American territory, he will have an opportunity to learn much of Cuban, Dominican and Haitian affairs while in the Caribbean. The widely advertised "revolution" in Cuba has dwindled into a series of pinpricks by overheated individuals. President Machado has maintained public order, and the working people of the island are not involved in the petty disorders fomented by "intellectuals" who are intoxicated by too liberal drafts of communistic literature.

Santo Domingo is hard pressed as a result of the hurricane of last September. Under the treaty and fiscal arrangements with the United States the Dominican government is entitled to borrow money, but the floating of a loan on fair terms and the judicious application of the proceeds to actual necessities are questions that are not easily solved.

MAKING THINGS HAPPEN.

Average citizens who cast their votes more or less as they please may get the idea that things just naturally happen in Congress. Not often do the ubiquitous lobby and the home-town band allow this. The volunteers who every year assail the legislative ramparts of Washington have furnished no small proportion of the fares that have kept some of the railroads out of receiverships. The number of persons in this country who spend their hard-earned cash for the public good is truly remarkable.

The last-hour adoption of "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem is an example of the power of the lobby. Preparations for this assault upon the lawmakers has been going on for years and years. Nothing was left to chance. It was a masterly example of preparation. Like the Byrd expedition, nothing was overlooked. Objection to the music because its high notes strained even a falsetto's register had been anticipated by a "masterly transposition of the tune to a lower octave." Representatives of 2,000 patriotic societies came to Washingtown armed with a petition signed by more than 6,000,000 citizens pleading for the officialization of the hymn, and they didn't just tell the judiciary committee the piece was now easy to sing; they brought along a beautiful soprano to prove it. Well, the bill passed, and this is just a memorandum to indicate that if ever you want the national hymn changed again some preliminary work has got to be done.

UNCLE SAM'S BUSINESS.

Henry Ford, who is quite a merchant himself in one line, delivers an optimistic discourse from Florida for Sunday reading in the course of which he says: "Let the Government stick to the strict function of governing. That is a big enough job."

The everyday business of running this country is quite an undertaking when one takes brief inventory of what has to be cared for. The last Congress appropriated $10,000,000,000 for the year's work and contracts in sight. It just happens that today's Treasury turnover will exceed $3,000,000,000.

The United States Government operates a gigantic department store in which every department is itself gigantic. To handle the work nearly 900,000 employes are required. They are scattered over 3,738,371 square miles. In Uncle Sam's continental farm alone there are 2,000,000,000 acres.

The people of the United States own property of one kind and another which must be protected, amounting in value to $360,000,000,000 and have an income of nearly $80,000,000,000 a year. They spend $14,000,000,000 of it every year for purchase and upkeep of automobiles.

Americans spend a lot of money at home but they find an extra billion a year for foreign travel, and here and there they have picked up diamonds to the value of $4,000,000,000. They are not clannish with their money in larger ways, either, for exclusive or intergovernment debts they are holding in excess of $16,000,000,000 in foreign securities of various kinds.

The average income and expenditures of the Federal Government now run about $4,000,000,000 a year, each way.

So it would seem a single executive at the head of the business of running the United States has a lot of things to think about and look after. No one will begrudge him a ten-day breath of salt air and at least partial surcease from a hard job.

SUBSIDIZING THE UNFIT.

An intensive campaign is being waged for the curtailment of oil production, plus an embargo on foreign oils, for the purpose of enabling the small wells of the midcontinent stripper fields to resume or continue production at a greater profit. The plan is to tax the public so that the sick and unfit in industry shall survive, in defiance of economic law.

To bolster the obsolete section of one line of business by a tax of higher prices upon all consumers is to establish a precedent for limitless demands of a similar nature. Such action would be nothing less than an attack upon American efficiency, which has effected economies that enable the United States to compete in the markets of the world while maintaining high standards of wages and living conditions at home.

This question is much larger than salvaging 5 per cent of the oil production of the United States; it raises the question whether small producers who are unable to meet honest competition shall be considered the charity wards of the Nation.

Certain sick railroads are demanding a curb on trucks and buses which serve the public with greater efficiency. Small grocers are fighting the chain systems, which buy agricultural products by the trainload and entire factory outputs. The notion store has succumbed to the department store. Farms in Vermont are abandoned because of greater and cheaper production in the Western States. Small automobile factories have disappeared as more efficient combinations have produced cheaper and better machines.

The United States is the world's leading exponent of the survival of the fittest and in rewarding efficiency. Great business enterprises succeed only when they meet the public demand for cheaper and better goods.

The arguments in behalf of public rescue of unprofitable oil wells do not mention the higher prices for oil and gasoline that all would have to pay. Nothing but higher prices for petroleum and all its products can save these unprofitable wells.

This country is not yet ready to adopt for its slogan, "Competition is the death of trade—curb it!" Unfortunate as the effect may be upon the few who are inefficient, they have served their usefulness in the United States when they can no longer survive without a bonus or a subsidy.

The combination of little oil producers is approaching the Government from one angle while Chairman Raskob of the Democratic national committee approaches it from another. The oil "independents" ask the Government to make arrangements that will tax the entire public to support uneconomic and unprofitable oil enterprises. Mr. Raskob proposes that the antitrust laws shall be amended or repealed, so that big business can make still bigger combinations in the nature of monopolies. The public interest requires that neither proposition shall prevail. Competition is the only power that can prevent monopoly. The people will not tolerate the creation of monopolies, nor will they subsidize uneconomic enterprises which can not face competition. In the business world competition should be free, in order that the fittest should survive; and then the fittest should be held to strict account by the Government, in order to prevent efficiency and success from becoming a monopoly.

BRITISH COMMERCE.

The opening of the British trade exposition in Buenos Aires is the signal for a campaign to recapture the lion's share of trade with the South American republics. The Prince of Wales and his younger brother are graciously inviting Argentina, Brazil and neighboring countries to pour their gold in Britain's lap. An amazing display of British products, valued at $22,000,000, has been assembled to dazzle prospective customers with Britain's industrial prowess. But it remains to be seen whether this elaborate show will have any appreciable effect upon Britain's South American commerce.

Advertising is an important part of trade. Great Britain is making every effort to revive its once preeminent position in world trade through that medium. The sons of the king carry the banners of commerce to all parts of the world, but unless Britain can lay down goods of high quality at prices comparable to those of other exporting nations, all this fanfare will amount to nothing.

The people who flock to see the Prince of Wales and to stare at Britain's assortment of marvels will turn away and buy American goods if they are of higher quality and lower price. The United States need not fear loss of its South American trade if the practices and policies which are responsible for development of that trade are continued. In the end the ability to produce what the world wants at prices which it can pay is what counts most.

Great Britain's industrial system at home is in a state of disintegration. Obsolete methods and machinery, heavy taxes to support men on the dole and maladjustment to modern conditions are responsible for Britain's loss of prestige in the commercial world. That country can not hope to recapture the trade it once held by advertising without correcting the deficiencies which brought it to grief. Britain's effort to regain lost trade should begin at home.

Another new planet is supposed to have been discovered. It would be much more practical for those fellows to discover new regions that might be in need of wheat and automobiles.

A glacier of mud is descending upon two French villages. The inhabitants will get a pretty good idea of what it's like to be confirmed by the United States Senate.

CANADA'S NEW MINISTER

By J. A. STEVENSON,
In Ottawa Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

Premier Bennett has now found a successor for Mr. Vincent Massey in the Canadian ministry at Washington, and we are sending you a young soldier-lawyer who is a somewhat new star in our political firmament. Maj. William Duncan Herridge, K. C., D. S. O., M. C., commonly called "Bill Herridge" by a wide circle of friends, is an Ottawan born and bred and the son of a Presbyterian minister. Eloquence should run in his blood, for his father, the late Dr. Herridge, was reckoned the finest Canadian preacher of his generation.

Maj. Herridge, who is 43 years of age, was educated at the Ottawa Collegiate Institute and Toronto University, where he distinguished himself both as a scholar and as an athlete. He had, however, scarcely begun to practice his chosen profession of the law when the war came and took him to France early in 1915. Such were his gifts for soldiering that he soon became a staff captain in the Second Canadian Infantry Brigade, and emerged safely from the war with the rank of brigade major and the well-earned decorations of the Distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross with two bars.

Returning to his law practice, he specialized in patent law and made a remarkable success of it; he also acquired as clients a number of American corporations whose business gave him contacts in the United States now likely to prove useful. As an Ottawan he could not escape being interested in politics, but, although his family traditions were Conservative, he was counted an independent with Liberal leanings.

Until last year his only adventure in politics had been of a semiprivate character. After the war, like many other young soldiers, having developed a contempt for the futile partisan bickerings and time-serving compromises of Canadian politics, as he saw them, he was one of the prime movers in the foundation of an organization called the Canadian League. It consisted of groups of young Canadians, mostly veterans of the war, who foregathered in different cities to discuss the problems of their country and try to assist in formulating an intelligent public opinion about them.

However, it was only last spring that Herridge took any active part in Canadian political warfare. When the general election loomed up he put his services at the disposal of Premier Bennett and accompanied him throughout the whole campaign as a sort of political adjutant.

Mr. Bennett developed such a high appreciation of his services and abilities that he took him to the imperial conference in London as his chief personal assistant, and thereafter people began to talk of Herridge as Premier Bennett's "Col. House." The sobriquet was not unjustified, for Herridge occupied no official position and yet was notoriously the Canadian Premier's closest confidant. It will be recalled that Mr. Wilson made his Col. House a semiofficial ambassador, but Mr. Bennett has given his friend an established diplomatic position.

Maj. Herridge is a handsome, well-built man in the prime of life, and he has been endowed with social qualities which make him the most charming of hosts and companions. It is true that he has had no previous experience of public life, but he has proved his capacity already as a student, as a soldier and as a lawyer, and his friends entertain no doubt that he will also make a very successful diplomat and that his appointment is a happy choice.

It happens that he is an old friend of Mr. Massey, who was his contemporary at Toronto University, and as he was frequently the latter's guest he has some familiarity with the Washington scene. Having lost his wife some years ago, he is a childless widower, but the Ottawa papers are hinting darkly that his engagement to Miss Mildred Bennett, the sister and constant companion of Premier Bennett, may shortly be announced.

He will have one common interest with President Hoover in that he is a lover of the woods and streams and for years every moment of his spare time has been spent at a country cottage which he owns on Lake Mousseau in the Gatineau Hills. He is also a fisherman and will never refuse invitations to the Hoover camp on the Rapidan.

Don't start any of that economy fuss about the Hoover trip; the battleship had to make a trial run anyhow.

A disposition to differ from Senator Fess' judgment is not altered by his assumption that his newly acquired title of "honorary colonel" in the District of Columbia Marine Reserves is "something like being a Kentucky colonel."

The name of the King of Siam, who is expected April 28, is Prawchat-a-Pok, with the accent on the second syllable; but in what language? He probably will shame us by speaking perfect English, and so few of us know enough Siamese even to ask about the twins. P. H.

A NOTE AND OTHER PROMISES.

"In ninety days I promise to repay
With interest a certain sum." I quote
Almost the legal phrasing of a note.
I can not find a line on it to say,
If irksome grow the burden then I may
Renounce the obligation and go free,
Calling the pledge too difficult for me.

And if I find to borrow was unwise,
Meeting with loss where I had hoped for gain,
Or further troubles cause me to complain
As day by day new difficulties rise,
Unchanged the debt against my record lies!
That note was made for better or for worse,
I still must pay the money from my purse.

To Keep the Frost From Killing Roses Cut Them for Your Neighbors.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MAN'S inhumanity to man is almost wholly a result of stupidity. With the exception of those unnatural creatures who delight in cruelty for its own sake, no man causes another to suffer except by reason of his failure to understand what he is doing.

The purpose of life is hidden from the wisest, but the plan of it is so clear that a child should understand it.

We are like those first settlers who were placed on the shores of America amid dangers and privations and left to fend for themselves or die.

One such company, perishing by famine and disease, saw death coming a long way ahead and pooled their resources so that all might share equally in the little that remained.

Many lost companies, facing starvation, have done that. In the face of certain and early death, greed and selfishness are forgotten. Men are purged of all that is not noble. Their one last ambition is to be fair. And the one who tries to take more than his share is suppressed by force or slain.

Suppose that one man in that doomed company of early settlers, being stronger or more fortunate than the rest, had grown more corn or killed more meat than any of the others. Do you think he would have hoarded it and watched the others starve, knowing that his own death would be delayed only by days or weeks?

Or if another, having plenty, had scoffed at those who shared with the weak and had argued that the preservation of weaklings would at last make all men weak, do you suppose the others would have called him a brilliant critic? I assure you they would have called him a brute.

Men see the truth and recognize values when death is near.

Why, then, are men so blind when all of us are under sentence of death?

Because they are stupid. A foolish and futile greed dulls their wits.

If they were intelligent, they could see that all of us are a doomed company.

They would labor, as they now do, to win the things that make life pleasant. They would provide for their old age and for their children. They would build for the sake of posterity.

But still, in the face of certain death, they would recognize their fellow men as fellow adventurers on a strange shore and in fairness would share with the weak. Selfishness would be recognized as the only crime. Compassion would replace blind and foolish avarice.

It is man's failure to realize the certainty of death that makes him brutal. And surely it is a poor intelligence that can not recognize a fact so unmistakable.

Republican Split Next.

New Orleans Times-Picayune.

The Democratic national committee's skirmish over prohibition already has roused to fighting pitch the militants in the Republican ranks. Senators Capper, of Kansas, and Dickinson, of Iowa, sounded the rallying cry for the "drys" in that camp last Saturday. They demand a party showdown on prohibition and serve notice that its national convention next year must adopt a straightout prohibition platform, with President Hoover as its candidate and champion. The Iowa militant, just taking his seat in the Senate, admits that Republican championship of prohibition will result in the loss of "some votes in the East." But he is cheerfully willing to bid them good-by because of his firm faith that a dry platform will "carry the Middle West and West solidly."

A Boom for Robinson.

Houston Post-Dispatch.

The movement to put Senator Robinson into the race for the Democratic presidential nomination takes tangible form through adoption unanimously by the Arkansas Senate of a resolution asking the Democracy of the Nation to choose the senator as its standard bearer in 1932.

The action comes so soon after Senator Robinson's speech before the Democratic national committee, in which he "dragged Chairman Raskob around the lot," to quote Gov. Al Smith, that there would seem to be some connection between the senator's fight on the Raskob liquor plan and the Arkansas Senate's boom of Mr. Robinson for the nomination.

Active Only in Scandal.

Detroit Free Press.

Throughout the whole of its history, the record of the Seventy-first Congress has been undistinguished, and that of the Senate in particular has been cross-grained and cheap. The general reputation of the upper House, so-called, has been lowered quite a number of notches. The obstruction of the passage of the tariff bill, which the Senate continued for many months, was unquestionably a contributing factor in the production of economic depression, if it was not actually the final exciting cause. The body seemed to be able to exert real energy only when scandal-mongering or playing politics.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Scientific Gent With a Suitcase Full of Snake Suggests Fearsome Possibilities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The story in The Post of the scientific snake charmer who brought the king cobra all the way from New York to the national Zoo in a cat case, and that case tucked away with him all through the night in his Pullman berth, may be good reading matter for the public, but rather poor advertising for the railroad and Pullman company that hauled him and his seven foot snake into Washington. In fact, it is to be suspected that both the railroad company and the Pullman company were imposed on; for it is inconceivable that either would permit any one to occupy sleeping compartments accompanied with a suit case full of poisonous snake. Maybe what one doesn't know, doesn't hurt him; but if there is any such thing as a subconscious instinct in such matters, I'll bet many a passenger aboard that car dreamed bad dreams all night long.

No danger, you say? Suppose there had been a wreck of the train and the suit case is smashed in the melee! I'd rather be in a Pullman car that is toppled bottom side up, with both its ends afire and getting hot in the middle, than waylaid in one on a side track where a king cobra is rambling around hunting for excitement. They don't run trains lengthy enough to include ordinary folks and a big snake in the same load.

Here's hoping that they are not transferring any skunks, tarantulas, Gila monsters or the like from New York to the National Zoo; but if so will some one please give dates and routings of the scientific gent with his famous suit case. W. F. EVANS.

Washington Not a Music-Loving City, Concludes One Who Attended Toscanini Concert.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder if your musical critic or reporter was actually present at the Philharmonic Orchestra concert on Tuesday. If he was, his comments to the effect that it represented an "irresistible combination" and drew a "capacity audience," indicate a strange defect in judgment. That it was not an irresistible combination was made quite evident by the far from capacity audience. The dollar seats were full; but, as for the rest of the house, I judge that about one-fifth of the seats were empty. This orchestra is absolutely first-class; as a conductor Toscanini has no peer. The program was, in the best sense, popular; yet this "irresistible combination" failed by a long way in drawing a "capacity audience."

That is the peculiar thing about musical Washington. It appears to consist of a comparatively small group of people in moderate circumstances. Possibly the house was actually "sold out," notwithstanding appearances. Possibly the hour of the concert made it impossible for many people to go. But I doubt the truth of either premise. My experience tells me that Washington is not a music-loving city. The only encouraging feature of Tuesday's concert was the fact that Toscanini began on time, irrespective of the habitual late-comers. If more conductors would follow his laudable practice, Washingtonians might some day learn that 4:30 means half-past four. WM. C. STURGIS.

Senator Costigan's Talk at Progressive Conference Compared With His Campaign Promises.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the published reports of Senator Costigan's speech on the tariff at the recent Progressive conference, I saw no reference to his campaign promises to the sugar beet growers of Colorado. It was reported that in the course of his campaign he proposed a bounty of 1½ cents per pound on the sugar content of the beets to be paid to the beet growers, and in addition a duty on sugar equal to the difference in costs of production as ascertained by the Tariff Commission.

It is interesting to compare this bid for the votes of the sugar beet growers with his recommendation in the Culbertson-Costigan-Lewis sugar report sent to President Coolidge in 1924, that the rate of duty in the tariff act of 1922 (1.76 cents per pound) be reduced to 1.23 cents per pound.

When Mr. Costigan was making his bid for votes in Colorado, he must have known that the bonus idea, strongly advocated by Congressman Frear, had been turned down by the House of Representatives, and that Senator Borah and other senators finally decided that it would be useless to resurrect the suggestion in the Senate. F. P. JACKSON.

School Children Should Have Finger Prints Registered.

To the Editor of The Post: Sir—Statistics show us that throughout this country of ours thousands of children of all ages are reported missing by parents each year.

I believe that all children attending school, whether it is a private or public school, should be finger printed as a positive means of identification.

If there was a law making it compulsory to take the finger prints of a child upon entering school and placing these finger prints in a central bureau of identification, a great many of these cases of missing children would be quickly solved.

We have laws compelling vaccination before a child may enter school. Why not compulsory finger printing? WM. F. GROSSKURTH.

RUSSIA TO REFORM HANDLING OF FARMS

Reorganization of Collective System Stresses Policy of "Work or Starve."

Moscow, March 15 (A.P.).—A new proposal to emphasize the dictum of "only those who work may eat" was presented today to the All-Union Congress. It consists of plans for reorganization of all collective farms in Soviet Russia along lines which seemingly resemble capitalistic methods, but which are expected to achieve results in output far exceeding the five-year plan.

In presenting the proposal to the congress, Commissar of Agriculture Yakubley said the communal farm movement already was a success with more than 9,000,000 peasant families having joined the farms. However, he added that officials admitted there were numerous defects and unsolved problems in the present system.

Under the new scheme the commissar of agriculture said the most difficult question—equalization of labor—was expected to be answered by introduction of the "piece work" system in more than 85,000 collectives. The standard of wages will be fixed in either money or commodities, so that the man who works hard will receive more than the man who does not.

Workers Provide Problem.

Previously the trouble has been that peasant families joining the collective farms have made certain contributions of live stock and farm equipment to the common fund. Many of these then did as little work as possible while the industrious one performed an undue portion of the work. This resulted in the government not receiving the percentage of grain to which it was entitled under the provisions of the collective farm plan.

At the same time, the slack worker would share equally with the hard toilers in the proceeds. The piece work system already is in use in a number of Soviet factories and experiments recently were made of the method on collective farms with excellent results, according to Yakubley.

The reorganization plan, while contemplating the maximum labor of every able-bodied man and woman on the farm, will provide a separate fund to care for the children and the sick and injured.

Kulaks' Days Numbered.

Yakubley told the congress many of the hated kulaks (rich peasant farmers) are on their last legs. He cited figures showing they sold 126,000,000 pounds of grain in the fiscal year of 1926-1927, while last year the government obtained from the collective farms 487,000,000 pounds.

"The problem of agriculture in the U. S. S. R. is already solved," Yakublew declared, "and the day of the kulak is passing. In many districts he has already disappeared."

Although he did not explain what has been done with these kulaks, it is understood the majority have been exiled to the northern districts and Siberia, where they are permitted to make a living by manual labor or in opening up barren tracts of lands.

The commissar told the congress that Russia has the largest farms in the world. One of them, he said, contains over 200,000 hectares (a hectare is almost 2½ acres). He added that 65,000,000 hectares were under cultivation in collective farms this year, in addition to 5,000,000 hectares in state farms.

"TRADER HORN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the novel by Ethelreda Lewis, featuring Harry Carey, Edwina Booth and Duncan Renaldo. Screen play by Richard Schayer, adapted by Dale Every and John Thomas Neville, with dialogue by Cyril Hume. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Reviewed Sunday afternoon (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

To the many laudatory notices that have already been given, but little can be added at the beginning of the second week of "Trader Horn" at the National Theater.

Photographed against the always interesting background of impenetrable jungle and the trackless African veldt, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has made an intensely thrilling screen transcription of the now famous adventures of Aloysius Horn.

Even without the engrossing narrative, "Trader Horn" would be one of the finest African travel pictures ever to have graced the silver sheet. But with the story, augmented by stellar character delineations by Harry Carey, Edwina Booth, Duncan Renaldo and Mutia Omoolu, the current attraction must be considered as in a travel adventure class by itself.

Harry Carey carries the title role excellently, expounding in natural fashion a bit of natural history that not only serves to elucidate certain points of the action, but also to spike unfounded beliefs in the lay mind.

In the role of Nina, Edwina Booth does a delightful job as the platinum blonde tribal goddess and Duncan Renaldo, in spite of his Spanish accent, acquits himself creditably as Peru, Horn's partner in his wanderings. Mutia Omoolu a shade the best of the cast in acting honors as Horn's "man Friday."

From the standpoint of photography and sound treatment, the picture occasionally leaves something to be desired, but, as a whole, "Trader Horn" furnishes the best combination of narrative and African adventure that has come along.

Dinner Party Guests Feted By Mrs. Keyes

AN interesting dinner was given last evening by one of Washington's most interesting residents, Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, wife of Senator Keyes, and better known to the literary world as Frances Parkinson Keyes.

Mrs. Keyes is the well-known author of several books and numerous magazine articles, and the dinner last evening was in celebration of the publication, on Saturday, of her new work, "Silver Seas and Golden Cities." The book is based on the trip which Mrs. Keyes and her son, Mr. John P. Keyes, took through Spain, Portugal and South America. Leaving the United States in April, 1929, they went first to Europe, and later to visit the Latin-American republics, returning to this country last April. Many of the articles appeared during their trip in a current publication, and have been revised and added to, to make up the charming book which Mrs. Keyes presents under the attractive title. It is illustrated with many photographs taken during the trip by Mr. John Keyes, and is dedicated to Mr. William F. Bigelow, editor of the magazine for which Mrs. Keyes was correspondent.

The guests of Senator and Mrs. Keyes last evening included the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Padilla, the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Ferrara, Mrs. John B. Kendrick, wife of Senator Kendrick; Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, the Charge d'Affaires of Colombia, Senor Don Jose Coronado; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, the Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe; the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Chermont, Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson, Capt. and Mrs. John N. Enochs, Mrs. Nathaniel B. Dial and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Messner, of New York.

The Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Malbran have issued invitations for a dinner on April 8, in honor of the Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson.

Robert Downing To Be Honor Guest.

Mr. Robert Downing, the well-known actor, will be the guest of honor at the Arts Club tomorrow evening and will give his "Recollections of Famous Actors." Mr. Clifford Berryman and Miss Florence Berryman will be hosts.

Roy T. Davis Celebrates First Anniversary as Envoy.

The United States Minister to Panama, Mr. Roy T. Davis, entertained at a dinner followed by a large ball and reception Saturday night to celebrate his first anniversary as envoy to that country. The dinner was given in the Miramar Club at Panama City, overlooking the sea, and honor guests were the President of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, remembered in Washington as the former Minister of Panama, and his charming chatelaine. Also among the honor guests were the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Charles Francis Adams, who is visiting in Panama; members of the cabinet of Panama and the Supreme Court; 24 admirals of the United States fleet and their staffs; Gov. Harry C. Burgess of the Panama Canal Zone, and Maj. Gen. Preston Brown, U. S. A.

The ball which followed the dinner was attended by 1,200 guests, including Americans and Pan-Americans. President Alfaro with Mrs. Davis, wife of the Minister, and Secretary Adams with Senora de Alfaro, led the guests from the reception hall to the club terrace where they opened the ball. A dance floor had been built for the occasion, and was lighted by search lights from the fleet, and the Pacific fortifications of the canal. The whole scene presented an effect of gayety and brilliance with a touch of formality and great dignity.

By ROBERT D. HEINL

WHEN Lewis T. Tune, of St. Louis, recently chosen by Secretary Hyde for the pleasant task of passing out the $20,000,000 to the agricultural drought stricken areas, appeared at WRC to make a radio talk last week, the broadcasters thought for a moment President Hoover was paying them a surprise visit. Mr. Tune is slightly taller and older than Mr. Hoover but his profile likeness to the President is very striking.

Mr. Tune's message, broadcast over 39 stations, was a welcome one to the drought sufferers. As chairman of the national loan advisory committee he told them that $10,000,000 of the $20,000,000 Congress appropriated was immediately available to help communities form new agricultural credit corporations or strengthen old ones.

What the Prince of Wales said in the speech he made in Spanish over the radio from South America Saturday was "It's no trouble for England to show you the goods."

AN effort to attract a larger number of visitors to Washington to see the nationally famous cherry blossoms that bloom in the spring (tra la!) will be made in a broadcast by Joseph D. Kaufman tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock over WMAL.

"If a small town like Winchester can 'ballyhoo' its apple blossom festival to the extent of attracting hundreds of thousands of people to that community," Mr. Kaufman declared, "certainly this beautiful and inspiring City of Washington should be able to do the same thing when its famous Japanese cherry trees break into blossom. On top of it, the city has everything on earth of interest and attraction to offer.

"I believe it was Representative Sol Bloom who made the remark that Washington is the greatest show place on earth, but lacks a showman."

Seth Parker, or Uncle Abe, as you prefer, will make his third personal appearance at Constitutional Hall this evening for the Central Union Mission.

Paul Robeson, Negro barytone, will broadcast for the first time Thursday, March 26.

LISTENERS may experiment with tuning WBAL, Baltimore, at the point on the dial where WJZ, New York, is usually received after 4 o'clock this afternoon, when the synchronization plan becomes effective. This should mean a clearer WJZ signal for Washington during the time WBAL is broadcasting on the same frequency with the New York station.

Rather than try to memorize the intricate schedule Frederick R. Huber suggests that any time listeners can not get WBAL on its own frequency they simply turn to WJZ, as hereafter WBAL will be constantly on one or the other frequencies.

A Washingtonian who got her start on the local boards, Kate Smith, will join the ranks of regular radio entertainers appearing over the WJZ network, each Tuesday and Thursday evening, at 11:30 o'clock, beginning tomorrow.

We will not get in on the first of the new series by Arthur Pryor's Band tonight (WABC network, 8 o'clock) sponsored by Cremo, but WMAL will carry the concerts the other five week-day nights of the week.

APPARENTLY riding easily in the saddle, insofar as his enlarged duties are concerned, Glenn I. Tucker, head of the public relations department of the Radio Corporation of America was in town for the week-end.

Mr. Tucker, recently stationed here, was formerly on the New York World but quickly left the ill-fated publication while the going was good.

Paris, March 15.

IT'S going to be the wise woman who knows her ready-to-wear this season! Because her ready-to-wear isn't ready to wear at all, if you'll forgive me my little play on words.

What, no ready-to-wear? No, no ready-to-wear * * * ready-to-choose maybe, and then to have carefully and perfectly fitted to you, so that it is a dress for YOU, not a dress for a dress.

It sounds complicated, I know, and even sounds as though I might be saying that you don't stand a chance if you can't have all of your clothes made to order. But I'm not saying that at all, just warning you that due to, oh, a number of things, life has become much more complicated in the style world!

I thought of this so often when seeing the spring and summer models of the famous couturiers * * * and comparing the gowns shown with those worn by the spectators and the saleswomen. Remembering, too, the styles of only three years ago * * * refresh your memory with an old-style magazine if you don't follow me! "Them was the happy days," when so little attention was given to the perfect cut and fit of a gown that sister could borrow your best dress for a date with her best beau and look simply lovely in it, providing, of course, you didn't catch her.

That would be absolutely impossible today. If a dress or coat doesn't fit absolutely at the shoulders, hasn't the right length of sleeve, and, much more important, doesn't fit perfectly and closely to the hips, it just simply isn't anything at all, no matter what other claims it might think it had to style or chic.

Buy ready-made dresses by all means, but don't spare $10 or even $15 for alteration charges, if you would be well dressed this season.

* * *

Haven't you got a dress or two in your wardrobe which could be given a new lease on life by a gesture no more complicated than that of sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet telling you how to make some of the newest collars and cuffs from Paris? They are called "lingerie touches," which mean the latest, most spring-like and youthful idea of the mode. And "lingerie touches" don't mean only collars and cuffs these days. Nothing as simple as that, my dear! So even if your dress in your estimation can't be rejuvenated with the mere collar and cuffs, better send for that leaflet, anyway—because I promise that "lingerie touches" are more than you bargain for and can revive any garment under fifty years old.

* * * *

Martial et Armand managed to add black shadow lace to a white crepe de chine dinner dress, and achieve charm—even more charm than I was able to show you in today's illustration. Not to mention the red rose at the shoulder, which is an old Spanish custom, as you know!

* * * *

You may wear your touches of turquoise blue this summer if you want to, but I'll tell you confidentially that turquoise is out, and too recently so to even be individual for you to wear. But on a black costume or ensemble, be sure and arrange something white and something green, and you'll be awfully smart!

* * * *

And there's a new evening pendant sketched for you today in a cut emerald, silver and black, just to emphasize the smartness of this color combination.

Of course you read Dare's weekly fashion letter in The Post yesterday, and there'll be another one next Sunday.

Au revoir!

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"PISCES."

IF March 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 a. m. to 11 a. m. and from 7 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from noon to 2 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. to midnight.

Creative mental workers will find themselves inspired and stimulated by astrological influences on this date and should give their best efforts to the world. A splendid time for travel and all that requires energy and quick decision. Propitious for dealing with correspondence.

The child born on this March 16 will have a nimble mind and nimble fingers. It will be ambitious and a hard rider over obstacles. It will love sports, seek adventure and surround itself with friends. A fondness of music and the fine arts generally is shown.

Your virtues are mostly negative ones, and you are the shadow of all stronger personalities which may surround you, and the victim of advice-mongers. You should learn to flee from those who try to take command of the ship of your soul. You are too willing to abdicate your own judgment, and too quick to listen to "you should not do that," or "you ought to do this." You have lost the power of decision and initiative.

You have a cordial disposition, pleasing manners, democratic views, and the gift of being amusing. Your words have no sting—far be it from you to desire to hurt any one by word or deed. You trust too much to luck, and do not take advantage of your opportunities, especially those of a material nature. It may be said, however, that you never feel sorry for yourself, and never whine for sympathy, no matter what your status may be. You always realize that there are others much worse off than you are, and you appreciate your blessings.

You are not afraid of work, but you fear solo responsibilities. You are also afraid to take the initiative in anything, but you can keep step with a leader. You have heart for your work, and zest for your play—you do not lack enthusiasm. If you be a woman, you are destined to find happiness within your home. If you be a man, an ambitious mate may ruin your peace through nagging.

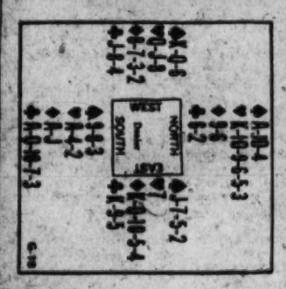
WORK ON BRIDGE

HOW TO FINESSE.



WITH the above hand at Auction Bridge, South would bid one No Trump, West pass, and North two Hearts, which would obtain the contract.

Played at Contract Bridge the bidding was: South one No Trump, West pass, North three Hearts, East pass, and South four Hearts.

The three-Heart bid by North was not justified by his holding. To fulfill the requirements for that bid, North should have a No Trump count of 11, and his No Trump count is 8—quite a shortage; but the six Hearts and two doubletons made North feel that there was a probable game at Hearts and he risked the bid.

In the play East led the King of Diamonds which South won. South then led the Ace, followed by the Deuce of Hearts, North playing the Five on the Ace and winning the second Heart with the King. When East refused, West was marked with the high trump and South's four of Hearts was not the entry that Declarer had hoped it would be. North's first lead was a Club; South finessed the Queen, took in the Ace of Clubs, and then led a third Club, North ruffing it and establishing dummy's Clubs. North then led a Diamond through East's Queen. East won this trick and had nothing to do but to lead a Spade; and when North won, he in turn had nothing to do but return it. West won, led the best trump and then cashed two Spades. So the enemy made in all two Spades, one Diamond and one trump.

What should have happened?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The better play would have been for North to have won the first round of trumps and then led Clubs while South had one or two Hearts entries; but after the trump situation developed, the double finesse in Clubs should have been taken. Declarer must, if possible, make up good Clubs in dummy to obtain Spade discards. When the Ten of Clubs lost to the Jack he would have been disappointed because West would have knocked two of Declarer's trumps together. But after the enemy took in a Diamond, North could ruff the next Diamond and then would have to risk a second Club finesse. It would win and two Spade discards would be obtained on the long Clubs in dummy.

Wives of Tomorrow

—FRANCES M'DONALD—

Should Husbands Be Tagged?

MRS. M. L. wants husbands tagged and licensed—and, no doubt, muzzled.

All in favor so signify. Carried. And now how much better off are we?

John has a nice, brand-new wedding ring on his funny-looking finger, and all the world knows that he is a married man. Will that keep him any closer to the home grounds? If he is the kind that likes to date the hotel waitress when away from home, will he not find a pocket in which to park the badge of servitude? Illogically, Mrs. M. L. points out that "if seen by his acquaintances without his ring he would immediately be under suspicion." Well, being seen out with a blonde has always placed a married man under suspicion. Yet married men of that type are seen by their friends out with blondes.

It would all seem to come down to the question of type. Some men have personal dignity equal that of any woman. And some have no sense of dignity at all. Some men have sufficient mentality to survive a few evenings spent away from home without calling in any feminine first aid. Others have looked to a mother, then to a sweetheart, then to a wife for evening entertainment and, alone, do not know what to do with themselves, and so call for assistance from some woman whose mentality usually matches their own. Mrs. M. L. seems to have selected this particular type. Read her letter. Do you consider a wedding ring—even riveted on—or a red vest, or any other warning under heaven would help the wife of Mr. M. L.?

Dear Frances McDonald: I am about in despair of going on with my marriage and want your opinion. We are not kids just starting out. I am 36 and he is 41. We have been married nine years and live very comfortably in a small, select community. He holds a responsible position—supervising other salesmen, and has to travel one State. When he is home he never budges from my side. No other woman ever gets anywhere with him. And I have seen a few try. But when he is on his trips. Very different. I am always hearing about how he was here or there with some girl. When I ask him he will tell me not to nag, as he will not lie to me. Then he starts some long story of how lonesome he was, and another week before he would be home, and so they went to a show. Now, what right has he going to shows with strange women? There is one place he goes and he always takes a certain young girl out when he is there. Is that any way for a married man to conduct himself? I asked him if she knew that he was married. He said he had never discussed his affairs or anything else with the girl. They go to a show, have a sandwich and go home. Is there any reason why he could not do all that without the aid of this waitress?

I am so disgusted. His mother tells me to let the subject drop. That most men look to women to cheer them up and it is all in a lifetime. Can you imagine that? Your husband going with a girl and it is all in a lifetime. I have asked him to wear a wedding ring or I would throw mine away. He told me to let my conscience be my guide. He, of course, states he has never done anything out of the way. Beau-ing around the waitress is nothing out of the way to him. I am not wearing my ring. And I do intend to have dates from now on when he is away. If it is nothing out of the way for him then it will be O. K. for me. I never heard of such nerve in all my life and if he will not wear the ring I am going to leave him—for good. How could I go about making him carry out my wish as I do not wish to break up my home and see another woman occupy it while I go out and look for work.

MRS. M. L.

Now what is the answer? Is it a wedding ring? Or the realization that a man's type determines his behavior, and neither leaving him nor tagging him will change him?

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

MID-MARCH IN YOUR GARDEN.

THIS is the time to go over your garden and note down the things that must be done between now and April 1, and also to line up the work that must be done in April, for if we depend on the April showers alone we may find we have few, if any, flowers in May.

First you must not forget to prepare your flats, for seed of such plants as dusty miller, verbena, lobelia and salvia should always be started in the house. Of course, where there is an unlimited pocketbook you can depend on purchasing plants which have been started in the greenhouse but this procedure makes large inroads into the garden budget.

This is the time to cut dead wood from raspberries or blackberries. This should be done every year and the bushes should be cut back every other year. March is also the month to set out fruit trees. Should you have a vegetable patch, spade it as soon as possible in order to have it ready when you want to set out young plants of cabbage or eggplant.

If you have a hotbed make use of it to sow some seeds of half-hardy annuals such as phlox drummondi, snapdragon or ageratum. You can sow these seeds in the open at this time if the ground is workable. This, of course, depends on the season.

After the middle of March is the time to topdress your lawn with bonemeal and do any reseeding that may be necessary. You can now with safety prune your honeysuckle and trumpet vines. Remove all dead wood and some of the old wood that is not dead and then tie the branches to their supports as you want them to grow.

March is the month when you must begin to uncover, or at least loosen the covering from your spring flowering bulbs; also from your perennials, and you may even begin to remove the covering from evergreens.

If you have a sun porch you should begin to divide and pot your cannas, tuberoses, begonias and caladiums.

YOUR NAME

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFARRARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "Skelton" is a northern English form of "Shelton." "Shelton" is derived from the Old English "scelf-tun" which means "the farm or estate near the ledge." There are several villages in England which are named "Skelton" and "Shelton." The family name was often given because of a former residence in one of those villages. An English record of the year 1379 bears the names of Willelmus de Skelton and Thomas de Skelton. The spelling "Shelton" does not seem to be recorded as a family name until much later. A London church register of the year 1561 records the marriage of Richard Shelton and Jane Hollingworth. Strangely enough, the spelling "Skeleton" is sometimes found, even though there is evidence that the families which are so called were originally named "Skelton." The study of names reveals many similar cases of unfortunate spellings. They are explained by the quite human tendency to give some meaning, however unauthorized to words the real meanings of which are not generally understood.

The family name "Herder" has come down to us from two German sources. It is frequently a modern form of "Hardher." "Hardher" is an old Germanic personal name which may be translated "bold army" or "bold warrior." Sometimes "Herder" is from a modern source, and means "he who guards the flock or herd."

The family name "Wolpert" has come down to us as the modern form of two old Germanic personal names. When it is derived from "Waldobert" it may be translated "powerfully bright." When its source is "Wulfbert" it means "bright wolf" or "famous wolf."

HOW IT BEGAN

By Russ Murphy and Roy Sarnoskey

THE LILIES OF FRANCE
LEGEND SAYS THAT A HERMIT WAS VISITED BY AN ANGEL WHO PRESENTED HIM WITH AN AZURE SHIELD ON WHICH WAS EMBLAZONED THREE GOLD LILIES. THE HERMIT WAS COMMANDED TO PRESENT THE SHIELD TO THE QUEEN CLOTILDA, WHO IN TURN GAVE IT TO HER ROYAL HUSBAND, AND VICTORY FOLLOWED HIS ARMS.
1931-FEBRUARY-1931
WHY WE CALL IT LENT
THE ANGLO-SAXONS CALLED MARCH LENCT-MONAT, BECAUSE IT WAS THE SEASON WHEN DAYS BEGAN TO LENGTHEN. LATER LENCT CAME TO MEAN SPRING TO THEM. THEN WHEN THEY ACCEPTED CHRISTIANITY THE CHIEF SEASON OF FASTING WAS IN THIS PERIOD SO THAT ALSO BECAME KNOWN AS LENCT WE CHANGED IT TO LENT
BLEEDING NOSE — A SIGN OF LOVE
TO THE ANCIENTS, A BLEEDING NOSE SIGNIFIED AN OVERFLOWING HEART, AND IT CAME TO BE REGARDED AS AN INDICATION THAT THE SUFFERER WAS IN LOVE.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

IS YOUR TOWN SAFE?

THIS article is written for citizens rather than for individuals, and especially for mayors, aldermen and commissioners of public works.

That typhoid has become unimportant is generally accepted. That the individual should so accept it is a justified conclusion. Not so the city fathers and the citizens who pay taxes and vote in elections. Especially is this true of the officials of cities of 5,000 or less. They are playing with powder.

Nollman and Gorman got together the typhoid histories of American and Canadian cities during the last ten years. In order to make the showing more nearly reflect the danger they combined epidemics of water borne diarrhea with those of typhoid. Nine cities have been held financially responsible, in large sums, for spreading typhoid or diarrhea among their citizens. This is nearly one a year. This does not include verdicts for small amounts. In at least one city the government had to sell bonds in large amounts to pay the judgments. The list does not include corporations that had to pay excessive damages for typhoid caused by industrial water supplies, imperfect cross connections and leaky mains. The study covered 282 outbreaks in which there were nearly 100,000 cases of the two diseases and 775 deaths.

One small city had two epidemics of typhoid due to exactly the same cause at an interval of two years. When the first epidemic occurred the cause was found and corrected and the authorities promised it would never happen again. Just two years later they forgot and the previous experience was duplicated. Five cities repeated their epidemics due to the same cause. It took a double dose of disaster to convince those who were responsible.

Four other cities were more unfortunate and more culpable than their five erring sisters. These five repeated their epidemics, but in each instance the two bracketed epidemics were due to different causes. In most cases the trouble arose from using untreated water that was unfit for that use when waterworks were installed or had been allowed to become polluted later on. In four cases out of ten the waterworks had been properly placed and planned, but the men operating the plants had fallen down on the job somewhere. There was some defect in collecting, storing, or distributing water, or in filtering it, chlorinating it, or in some other part of the waterworks.

Most of the trouble occurred in cities of 5,000 inhabitants or fewer. Unprotected, cross-connections between fire plugs and hydrants, or in industrial plants, was responsible for much of the trouble.

REPLY.

1. I don't think so.

NATS' RALLY BEATS ORIOLES IN PITCHERS' DUEL, 3-1

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, March 15.—The news that the British Rugby Union has severed relations with the French Rugby Football Federation because three players have been killed and some others badly hurt in France this winter conveys the impression that the sportsmanship of the French isn't what it might be.

The American team that won the Olympic rugby championship in Paris had a similar idea, as the boys were robbed of their watches and money which had been left with their clothes while they were on the field. And, too, some of the American rooters who chirped a few cheers at that game were given a jolly shoving around by French sportsmen in the stands who bent their canes over the Americans' skulls.

But what country has a monopoly on brutality and muckerism in sport?

Last year it seemed to be Italy, when the Italians let fly the shrillest squawk in many a year and made diplomatic incidents of a couple of defeats in international soccer, a game which produces more fighting than pugilism anyway.

But bad news sounds louder and travels farther than good news. It is no news at all that a couple of teams or rival crowds conduct themselves in perfect decency and sportsmanship. It is only when the breach occurs that the subject comes up at all. No editor would lead the paper with the fact that John D. Rockefeller was feeling very well today. But let Mr. Rockefeller go to a hospital, and the ribbon strips will yell about it.

Quaint Old Custom of U. S.

Any one who was familiar with the rural American scheme of sporting rivalry a few years ago thoroughly understood that no ball game between rival towns in the same county was likely to go beyond the seventh inning, because the home town boys by that time would have sicked their local poolroom Sunday punch champions on the visiting crowd. The visitors then would have fought their way to their flivvers and set off down the road in a great rush to get elsewhere. It was customary to try to steal the other team's gloves, bats and other paraphernalia, and, for all I know to the contrary, this may still be the case in the rivalries of little towns and of neighborhoods in big cities.

At one such ball game on the Chicago lake front quite a few years ago there was some question of jostling between a ball player and the first baseman. One dirty remark led to a dirtier one, and in the ensuing riot one young sportsman was just about to bend a 36-ounce ball bat over the rival's head from behind when a policeman in plain clothes whipped out a weapon something like a leather sock filled with birdshot and fetched him one swift, accurate swipe right across the cap button. This young man became a hospital case, but it was a deliverance, at that, for if that ball bat had descended a few inches more he might have gone away for from twenty years to life.

Another personal recollection of the kind has to do with a great Negro football player named Fritz Pollard, who was playing a sandlot game on a Saturday afternoon and tearing through the other team like a bullet through a cloud of smoke. A young man on the other side, of rather difficult disposition, announced between halves that he was going to attend to Pollard the next they met. They met. He did. Pollard was knocked dizzy and, though he finished the game, he was not of much use. It was a knee that did it.

Doctor Won Medal Later

A cowardly act, says the theory of sportsmanship, but the young man who did this presently became a doctor, went to war and came back with

Capital Scene Of Davis Cup Contests

North, South American Winners to Clash in May.

U. S., Argentina Favored to Play at Chevy Chase.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

WASHINGTON will be the scene, on May 28, 29 and 30, of one of the year's greatest tennis events—the Davis Cup match between the winners of the American Zone and the South American Zone—which will be played at the Chevy Chase Club, according to an announcement made public today by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

It will be the first time in the history of Davis Cup competition that a zone finals will bring together teams of the North and South Americas. The South American Zone was formed this year, and will be made up of Argentina, Paraguay, Uruguay, Brazil and Chile. Play in this area starts March 26, when Paraguay and Argentina meet. Uruguay meets the winner April 2, 3 and 4, and Brazil plays Chile April 3, 4 and 5. The finals in the zone will be played April 11, 12 and 13.

Action in the American Zone brings the United States against Mexico at Mexico City on May 1, 3 and 5. Canada plays the winner on May 21, 22 and 23, at Montreal.

South Americans

Due May 10.

The winning team of the South American Zone will arrive in Washington about May 10 and will make its headquarters at either the Chevy Chase Club or its accredited legation. The South American squads are made up of from four to six players. Whatever the outcome of the match, the South American team will embark immediately for Europe, where they will participate in the English championships at Wimbledon and return to this country for play in several of the Golden Jubilee tournaments, probably the national singles and doubles championships.

The Davis Cup and International Play Committees are in charge of the Davis Cup play in this hemisphere. Committee officers and members are Holcombe Ward, Louis J. Carruthers, Lawrence A. Baker, of the Chevy Chase Club; Louis B. Dalley, Fitz-Eugene Dixon, C. S. Garland, Paul W. Gibbons, W. M. Hall, Phillip B. Hawk, Cedric Major, Dean Mathey, Jones Mersereau, Julian Myrick, Walter Pate, B. S. Prentice, J. W. Thurston, Watson Washburn and Joseph W. Wear.

Third Davis Cup Match Here.

This is the third consecutive year that this city has been named as the scene of a Davis Cup match. The Chevy Chase Club presents an ideal setting for the event, and it has become an important date on the calendar of both athletic and social Washington.

Washington's first glimpse of Davis Cup play was in May, 1929, when the American team defeated Japan in the American zone finals, four matches to one. Last May the United States defeated Mexico, five matches to none.

The United States and Argentina loom as the favorites to win their divisions, and it is probable that they will proffer tennis to the galleries at Chevy Chase in May. Argentina has the best netman South America has ever developed, Willy Robson, whose fleetness of foot and admirable volleying make him a strong opponent for most of the world's great players.

The American Davis Cup Team is still unpicked. After the national championships at Forest Hills last

HUNTINGTON BEACH won the game in which Howard Morning struck out 26 men in the twelfth inning by a score of 1-0. Morning allowed only one hit for eleven innings. In the twelfth he fanned the first batter, the next singled, the third fanned, the fourth singled, advancing the runner, who scored on a third single to win the game.

If a chimney swift touches the ground it is by accident, for where it alights on a flat surface it is practically helpless. The swift's legs are unusually short and all of its toes point forward. Its claws are adapted for clinging to the side of chimneys or other similar vertical structures. It can not even alight on a tree limb and has to gather twigs for its nest while still on the wing.

Central High Five Meets Bliss Tonight In District A. A. U. Tournament Contest

Griff-Consumers Play Alexandria Five at 9 o'Clock.

CENTRAL HIGH'S tossers, officially coholders of the high school championship and unofficially the champions by virtue of their recent informal victory over Eastern, will make their debut tonight in the District A. A. U. basketball tournament, which The Washington Post is sponsoring at the Tech High Gymnasium, Second and T streets northeast.

BBliss Electrical School, of the Washington collegiate Conference, will offer a high hurdle for the charges of Burt Coggins. The battle which will start at 8 o'clock on the main court, scene of the high school battles.

Four other struggles are on the program. At 9 o'clock the Griffith Consumers, Prince Georges County champions, meet the Virginia A. C. five of Alexandria, and at 10 o'clock the Petworth Mets tackle the Night Hawks.

Two games will be played simultaneously on the divided courts at 7 o'clock. These involve the Nativity and Burns fives in the 115-pound class and the Georgetown A. C. and Alexandria Scouts in the 130-pound class.

Fans Discount Youth Of Central Five.

Despite the youth of the Central High players, the team is being stamped among the tournament favorites by a majority of fans. Many remember the appearances of the Central team of Moser, MacDonald, Banta, Nee, Burgess and the others in the tournament three years ago at the Arcadia.

This combination proved the sensation of the tournament, eliminating the then powerful Company F team, of Hyattsville, to reach the semifinals where it was nosed out by the Quantico Marines, led by Jim Levey, now with the St. Louis Browns.

Starting this season with an apparently mediocre team, Coach Coggins saw his players lose two games early in the high school series. He polished them up, however, and as the season wore on Burke, Broadbent, Swift, Rice and Co. began clicking off victories which were to send them into a tie with Eastern for the official title.

It is the improvement of the eCntral team which has gained it many backers in the amateur play.

Bliss, under the coaching of N. L. Almony, will be depending on Edgar Zirkle, Edwin Parkinson and several other fast players.

The Griffith Consumers are not without backers this year. A team composed of big players, the Consumers have had a successful season under the leadership of Bob Llyes, and include in their line-up John Sherman, Grover Adair, Nicholson, Bert Zahn and Bob Elliott.

Alexandria fans will be on hand to cheer the Virginia Athletic Club against the Marylanders.

With the tournament entering its second week, play has already gained that ferocious stage which has marked similar Post tournaments in the past. After Wednesday night, the first round in every division will have been completed. From that point on the fireworks are expected in increased quantities.

Some of the second round unlimited battles that are keenly anticipated are Quantico Marines vs. Boys Club, Mount Vernon vs. J. C. C. Red Cross winner, United Typewriters vs. Trinity, Clovers vs. Palace-St. Stephen's winners; First Baptist vs. Calvary M. E. and St. Martin's vs. Griffithe-Virginia winners.

Saks Clothiers, outstanding contenders in the 145-pound class, will make their first appearance against the winner of tonight's Petworth Mets-Night Hawks clash, probably on Thursday night. Any number of brilliant battles are expected in the lighter weight classes.

In the girls' senior division, the battle of the Jewish Community Center and the Als A. C. will be one of the features of the latter part of the week.

Palace and St. Stephen's To Battle.

Tomorrow night's program is expected to provide thrills. The expected feature brings the old Foggy Bottom-Southwest rivalry into action in the clash of the Palace-D. G. S and St. Stephen's fives. With a generous sprinkling of Irish on both sides, this St. Patrick's Day battle should make the gym hum.

The program will also mark a meeting of the Company A team of the Thirteenth Engineers at Fort Humphreys with the Potomac Boat Club Scholastics. The latter team is composed, in the main, of Eastern High School stars of this season, led by Dallas Shirley

10,000 German Rugby Fans Invade Paris and See French Win, 1 to 0

PARIS, March 15 (U.P.).—Twelve special trains landed 10,000 German soccer fans in Paris today for the first match, with the exception of the olympics, between French and German football teams since the World War. France won, 1 to 0.

The German "invasion" passed without incident. Tourists across the Rhine flocked to Versailles, outside Paris. Hundreds went inside the historic old palace, evincing particular interest in the mirror hall where Bismarck created the German Empire in 1871. The peace treaty ending the war was signed there in 1919.

German and French newspapers pleaded for calmness during the visit today. The French press called on the people to extend "dignified hospitality" to the visitors. Copies of the Berlin sportspaper Kicker were distributed on the tourist special trains. It carried an editorial which said:

"Don't sing German, whatever you do. Too much singing got us into trouble during the Amsterdam olympics. Don't 'Hoch!' but shout 'Tempo, Tempo,' as encouragement to the team, replying to the French cries of 'Allez, Allez.'"

Nats to Chase West Jinx Says Fan

WRITING to the Baseball Editor of The Post from the New Bern (N. C.) Sanitarium, W. H. Henderson entered The Post's Box Seat Contest yesterday with one of the keenest letters any of the fans have sent in.

Outlining reasons why he picks the Nationals to bring the world series to Griffith Stadium, Mr. Henderson states that the splendid reserve strength the team has this year is going to preclude any possibility of disastrous Western tour, as suffered last year when first place was the premium. Lack of reserves, to fill in the spots that had gone "stale," cost the Nats the championship last year, but this year—with Hayes, Harry Rice, Kuhel, Bolton, Hargrave and Jones ready to don the uniforms of the regulars—is going to tell another story.

The Nats, Mr. Henderson believes, are going to lose more games next year than the year before, but so are all the rest. Last year was a boom year and Washington is least likely to be hit by the reaction. Mr. Henderson expects the Yankees partially to break the spell Washington holds over them, but the big change will be the way Washington is going to treat the St. Louis Browns. Against Philadelphia, Mr. Henderson believes the team will split even.

Sees Yanks Hard to Beat

Marberry, Crowder, Hadley and Brown are aces of the first rank. And Liska can be counted on to win fourteen games. However, the pitching doesn't worry Mr. Henderson. Nor is he concerned with the rivalry between Buddy Myer and Jack Hayes. "If Hayes beats out Myer, then the team is that much beter," he points out.

Harry Rice will supplant Sam when the sun shines hot, and Myers—if Hayes wins the second-base berth—should be shifted over to third. The other positions will remain the same as last year, although the Nats could use a walloping catcher.

Mr. Henderson takes his place along with many fans who have written in their predictions in 250 words and come under the consideration of the baseball editor and his cohorts, whose duty it will be to decide just which fan deserves those six box seats for the opening game April 14 between the Athletics and the charges of Manager Walter Johnson.

Myer's Triple, Rice's Single Bring Victory in 6th.

Only 9 Batters Face Brown; West Proves He Can Throw.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Post Staff Correspondent).

BILOXI, Miss., March 15.—In a pitchers' battle, in which six flingers granted a total of but nine hits, the Nationals today avenged a licking handed them last Thursday by downing the Baltimore Orioles, 3 to 1. Fritz Meisel, in charge of the Birds, called on Southpaw Harry Smythe, Roy Luther, former Nat, and Milt Clarkson, while Bobby Burke, Adolph Liska and Lloyd Brown did the chucking for the Johnsons.

The only alien run of the game was scored off Burke in the second inning, when Stroner tripled and registered on Sand's single. This tally loomed large until the game was more than half over. Then, in the sixth, the Nats climbed aboard Roy's offerings for two markers, the result of a walk to Liska, Myer's triple, and Sam Rice's single, and this brace of runs was enough to win, although another came in the eighth on two bases on balls and one shots by Bolton and Hayes.

Brown in Best Form.

For those who like stick action the game did not offer much, but it was a well-played affair, with the fielders showing midseason form and with Lloyd Brown's box work outstanding. This lad sat down the nine who faced him in quick succession, fanning one in the seventh and eighth and two in the ninth. He had both speed and curves, and none of the aliens was able to even hit one of his offerings to the outfield.

The fielding feature of the game was contributed by Third Baseman Stroner, of the Orioles. In the Nats' eighth, with the bases loaded and Dave Harris up, this lad rushed over behind the bag to grab a screamer on the first bound and to nail the hitter with a great peg to the first base. This stop cost Dave a double and the Nats two more runs.

Myer, Hayes, Sam Rice, Bolton and Judge, with one hit each, all but Myer's being singles, represented the Washington batting attack, while Denny Southern's double and Stroner's triple were the biggest blows, from a Baltimore standpoint.

West Proves Ability To Throw.

The game showed Manager Johnson two things—that Outfielder Sammy West can peg when he has to, for he cut two loose during the fracas, and that Cliff Bolton is learning how to catch foul flies. The little receiver ended the game by camping under a mile-high one off Joe Hauser's bat.

Business for the Nationals picks up this week, with games scheduled with the Orioles at Gulfport on Wednesday, with Springhill College, of Mobile here on Friday, and with the Louisville Colonels here on Saturday and Sunday. On the few off days scattered in between, Manager Walter Johnson plans to take up a few new features, that is, new for this year's practice sessions.

Pitchers to Be Taught Tricks.

Not only will base running come in for some attention, with the athletes being instructed in the art of taking big leads, but at the same time the pitchers will get some needed practice in trying to hold the runners on the bases. The latter is quite important. Inability to make runners hug the bases without sacrifice of "stuff" on the offerings served the batters has proven to be the downfall of many a hurler. President Clark Griffith, than whom there was no smarter in the business when the Nat owner was a pitcher, will be the instructor to the moundsmen.

Johnson also has in mind drilling the squad in a few plays. One, which he considers a "life-saver," was quite effective when Bucky Harris was in command. It calls for close cooperation between the catcher and third baseman with an enemy runner on third and none or one out. If played correctly, a double play invariably results, provided a ground ball is hit.

On this play, the fielder shoots the ball home and the third baseman follows the runner, who, of course, stops. The catcher throws the ball to third just as the runner stops, enabling the third baseman to tag the man with no lost motion and then to quickly peg to second. Usually, the hitter has rounded first and is headed for the keystone sack, anticipating a long run-down, and he is neatly trapped.

"I have several other plays in mind," Johnson said tonight, "and I plan to work them out after we get this one down pat."

Nat "Cripples" Improve.

Most of the Nat "cripples" showed improvement this morning. Carl Fischer and Wally Dashiell were limping slightly from foot injuries but are just about O. K. again, while Johnson declared his little Charley horse disappeared over night. Spencer's left shoulder is still a trifle stiff but not enough to keep him from working.

Uppercut Ends Battle of Indian Women in Sixth Round of Match

MADRAS, India, March 15 (A.P.). Repudiating the theory that women belong to the weaker sex, two prominent Indian society women today engaged in a fierce six-round prize fight. The bout ended in a knockout, but the referee, with masculine gallantry, declared it a draw.

Mrs. Kamalaba, of Malabar, amid the cheers of her supporters, sent her opponent, Miss Sitabai, of Tanjore, to the floor with a terrific uppercut in the sixth round. Both women by that time were bleeding and battered and appeared to be groggy. Until the uppercut the unmarried woman had the better of the encounter.

An immense crowd attended the fight, shouting encouragement to their favorite. This was the first public exhibition of pugilism among women in India, where women still are less emancipated than in many other countries.

Shoreham Pool Scene of Contests This Week-End.

MORE than 60 entries, including those of at least four 1930 champions, are expected for the second annual indoor swimming championships to be conducted Friday and Saturday nights at the Shoreham Hotel pool, under auspices of the District of Columbia Association of the A. A. U.

Forty-three entries had been received up until Saturday by A. Earle Weeks, chairman of the committee in charge, and the entries of the Washington Swimming Club, one of the chief participating organizations, are anticipated in this morning's mail.

The champions whose entries are already in the hands of Weeks are Frank Mullen, of Catholic University, 100 and 220 yards free style, and Mary Chadwick, Capital Athletic Club, 100 and 220 yards (women) free style.

Lois Bates Defends Her Title.

Lois Bates, 100-yard back stroke titleholder, and Onalene Lawrence, 100-yard breast stroke and fancy diving champion, both of the Washington Swimming Club, are expected to file their entries today.

The entry of Constancio Alvarado, member of the Filipino Olympic team in 1928, also is looked for. He specializes in the 220-yard breast stroke.

Among the organizations represented in entries already filed are George Washington University, Catholic University, Central High School, Capital A. C. and Swavely Prep School.

Clifford Sanford, winner of the 1930 indoor and outdoor fancy diving championships, thus far has not been heard from.

'A. A. U. Officials Meet Tonight at Tech, High

A heavy program of spring activity will be discussed by the board of managers of the District of Columbia Association of the A. A. U., in a meeting tonight at Tech High School Gymnasium, starting at 8:30 o'clock.

Championship tournaments in swimming, boxing, handball and track and field will be considered. Definite arrangements for swimming and boxing tourneys already have been made, the swim meet to be held this week and the ring event next wek.

Preceding the board meeting, the swimming committee will gather at 7:30 o'clock to complete details for the tank event.

Special to The Washington Post.

Fort Humphreys, Va., March 15.—Company A, Engineers, cagers proved that they were in fine shape for their A. A. U. tournament clash with the Potomac Scholastics in Washington tomorrow night, by handing the Boys Club Celtics a 40-to-20 lacing here this afternoon.

Led by Whitt and Clayton, who scored twelve and eight points, respectively, the soldiers jumped into the lead at the start and were never headed. A Panella and Clarke were the visiting luminaries.

The Timid Soul —By H. T. Webster

Boots and Saddles

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—St. John's Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

WITH the extension for this week of the Jefferson Park meeting, and the racing at William V. Dwyer's St. Johns track up to and including March 28, the gap at Bowie will be for one day only, Monday, March 30, the season at Bowie, Md., opening on Tuesday, March 31, which is the beginning of the major season on the big apple.

St. Johns Park features the American Legion Claiming Handicap today, fourth on the program, for 3-year-olds at 6 furlongs. FERVID should win, on her easy victory over Talented Prince. The chief danger is to come from PORTERDI. SILVER CANOPY will have AIRLINER to beat for show.

FIRST RACE—DARK CELT should win here, having contested every inch of ground with Butter Beans last week, and was beaten only a half length. FLUENT and STELLA F. are both keen contenders.

SECOND RACE—STEPHANS is the class of this. The J. E. Widener castoff in his last start beat Sullivan Trail going away, at odds of 1 to 2, which should give him an easy victory here if repeated. SUNCHEN should be the contender. DA VINCI should hold the others safe.

THIRD RACE—ZACHARY stands out in the third race on the form displayed in his last start, in which he was third to Sun Meddler and Guffie. That race should put him on edge for this conflict, and he is in weaker company. FLYING WINGS is expected to be the contender. MAY UPSET can do much better than last race indicates.

FIFTH RACE — BIRDIE WRACK looks best and should repeat, having beaten Sun Ranger in his last start. SUN MEDDLER, winner twice recently, only has to repeat either of these efforts to be a dangerous contender against the top horse. HONEST JOHN is selected to take the show money.

SIXTH RACE—FOLAMILE is selected in the sixth race. He did not run to his best form last time but is dead fit and can beat this company, if he has a jockey that knows how to handle him. WOOLORAC is the strongest of the opposition. DIAL should improve.

SEVENTH RACE—All of the fields are crowded with horses, and too many of them are cheap ones. In the seventh, CANDY PIG, though beaten last out, looks best of the lot. NEALON KAY should be the contender. He is always consistent, more than can be said for CANDY PIG. KING LO should get third money.

EAGLES BEAT STEWARTS, 31 TO 30

Skinkers Pressed to Win; Consumers Also Score.

THE Independent League's last hope—that the Stewart Bros. Photographers would wallop the Skinker Eagles and thereby prove that at least one team in the circuit could whip the league champions—came very near materializing yesterday afternoon when these two clubs clashed at the Silver Spring Armory.

The Skinkers encountered unexpected opposition from the Photographers and were extremely fortunate to eke out a narrow 31-to-30 triumph over their scrappy opponents who never did stop trying.

The Stewarts deserve all sorts of credit for the way they continually carried the fight to the champions. Several times they were 10 points behind, only to rally on each occasion and return to worry the Skinkers not a little.

The Eagles assumed the lead at the outset and managed to preserve it to the end. They flashed their best brand of basket ball in the first half when they outplayed and outscored the Stewarts, 23 to 16.

Stewarts Close Cap.

The Photographers managed to keep pace with the Skinkers in the third period, which ended 28 to 21. The fourth quarter was the most thrilling of all, the Stewarts slowly, but surely, closing the gap which separated them from the title-winners, yet, never quite succeeding.

Joe Sweeney's foul toss making the score 31 to 26, with two minutes left to play, proved to be the deciding factor, as Hessler and Harris sank field goals shortly afterward to make the count 31 to 30, where it stayed to the end.

The outstanding player on the floor was Doc Hessler, Steuart forward, who was the key of his team on the attack and defense. He also copped high-scoring honors with six field goals and one foul. The performances of Sweeney and Bennie, of the winners, and Harris, of the Photographers, also featured.

In a well-played preliminary attraction, the Griffith-Consumer tossers scored a 44 to 31 triumph over the Pontiacs.

The all-around team work of the Griffs, with Hickey and Cohen showing to particular advantage, featured their win. Young, of the Pontiacs, led his club and also topped both quintets in scoring, pocketing eight field goals and three fouls.

Berger to Play Third Base For Maryland This Season

THE sterling keystone combination of Maryland University's baseball team—Bozie Berger at second and George Chalmers at short—has been broken up, with Berger going to third base, the position in which he starred as a member of the Tech High School nine several years back.

This severance of what was considered the best middle sack duo in Southern college ranks last spring was decided upon by Coach Burton Shipley last Saturday at the conclusion of Maryland's first week of diamond practice.

The change plugs a gap at third base occupied in 1930 by Bob Gaylor, who quit school last fall, and makes way at second for Melvin Derr, who, while being a good fielder, is unable to throw as well from third as from the middle sack. Derr, a senior, played at short in 1929, but was laid out for the 1930 season, due to a broken leg.

Berger Has Strong Arm.

REV. M. B. M'BRYDE URGES LENT AS AID TO SELF-DISCIPLINE

REPRESSION ADVISED TO CONSERVE POWER

Curb on Anger Illustrates Advantages to Be Gained in Personal Training.

The observance of Lenten fasting as representing the spirit of self-discipline was explained to the congregation of Grace Episcopal Church yesterday by the Rev. Mead Bolton MacBryde, pastor of the church, in a Lenton sermon, "When Ye Fast."

"We have no life of our own, no power of our own, until we can pin it down, curb and control it," he said.

Mr. Bolton MacBryde's sermon, in part, follows:

One of the most interesting studies is the study of customs. Each age and generation has its customs which seem odd and antique to the generations that follow.

Customs in Christ's Time.

There were, no doubt, many customs in vogue in our blessed Lord's day which had existed and which He may be said to have inherited. Christ constantly warned the Scribes and Pharisees against abiding too closely to certain forms and customs. He said on several occasion, "Woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, for you pay tithe of mint, anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law—judgment, mercy and faith."

When our blessed Lord walked the streets and saw the Jews standing in the market place, and on the street corners making loud and long prayers, He realized what a hollow form many of these practices or customs had become, but He does not condemn such customs, but urges their earnest and sincere observance, here as in other matters.

Did you ever stop to think that the most important service of the Christian Church—the Holy Communion—grew out of the fact that Christ took bread and broke it?

So here, He takes what is at hand and blesses it with His insight, and crowns it with the hope of what it ought to be. There is no sneer in His words when He speaks of fasting, and He takes it, uses it, and lo! it becomes what it should be. He says to them—"When ye fast," and then tells them how fasting may be rightly, and wisely, and helpfully used.

Teachings of Men.

There are scores and scores of men in all parts of the world writing and speaking and teaching how the world should be reformed, how the church should be abolished, or reorganized; how wealth should be taken from the rich, how the present economic and social condition should be overturned—that is condemnation—but how few there are who take the world as it is, and would be willing to spill their blood to improve it.

One man who can prove that he is unenvious of wealth when it is rightly and wisely used, who accepts the present economic and social condition, and strives to the utmost to make them fair to all, that is fulfillment. Such men have their disappointments but they mold them into grace.

When Christ turned to His disciples and said to them "Moreover, when ye fast," He saw clearly that the hypocritical fasting of the Pharisee could be turned to good account.

Sword of Spirit.

What a splendid "Sword of the Spirit" Peter could have had if he had taken the molten iron of his temper and had allowed it to become as hard as steel. What splendid possibilities of good Christ saw in Judas, if he had but starved his selfishness and have killed his greed of gain.

For all those men—there was fasting—of one kind or another, that could have helped them to a wonderful extent. Throngs of people followed Christ and leaned upon His strength—children ran to Him and climbed into His lap. Think you that giving out so much of Himself He was not at the same time restraining and controlling and starving the flesh that the spirit might be strong?

Build a wall across a stream and watch how the current will rush and dash against it, and notice what a torrent will pour through when the barrier is removed. No power can be gotten from steam so long as it is free and unconfined, but restrain it, compass it, and then it will carry you over land and sea.

Estimate of Lent.

Many people, if they think of the Lenten season at all, think of it as having but scant significance and small value in these times, and there is an observance so superficial that it is absurd; but on the other hand, there are scores of people for whom the spirit of Lent—the philosophy that underlies this season—could be and, in some cases, is a wonderful help. Men who need to stop for a time and find out if they control themselves or whether habits and sins control them.

We have no life of our own, no power of our own, until we can pin it down, curb and control it. Have you never noticed that it is frequently the man of the highest degree of nervousness who can on occasion be completely calm? The most intense silence, the most perfect hush, in all nature is that which comes just before the storm. If you have no hours of quiet and recuperation, if you have no time when your nerves are still, you will have no strength to withstand the strain.

Guard Against Evil.

When the quick, angry, cutting speech comes to your lips, close them and keep them closed. When the temptation comes to do some deed which you should not do, clinch your hands and hold yourself in.

When you dream of some great deed, go instead and do some inconspicuous bit of self-sacrifice. When you long for recognition and for publicity, go home to your fireside and "brighten up that corner."

The form of it matters little; the philosophy of it and the spirit of it is everything. Is there anything more weakening than noble dreams and good resolutions without the fulfillment of them? Lofty aims but no real attempt to realize them. To kneel in this church today, to go to yonder altar and receive the Holy Communion, and then not to fulfill the high ideal of worship—not to live through the coming week in the spirit you have professed here today, is merely weakening and deteriorating to your moral nature.

Baby Detests Castor Oil; Mother Calls Fire Squad

The screaming siren of a Casualty Hospital ambulance opened a traffic lane. In its wake came the shrill warning of the fire rescue squal car. A physician brought his automobile to a screeching stop at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. An police scout car, radio equipped, lent the din of its siren to the noise.

Doctors, policemen and firemen rushed into an apartment house. An excited crowd gaped through the apartment house door. Must be a murder," some one said, and the others nodded in grave approbation.

QUINN ASKS PEOPLE TO CLING TO FAITH

A message of St. Patrick to cling to the faith was reiterated yesterday by the Rev. Peter P. Quinn, noted Marist preacher, in the second of a series of radio sermons on the Washington Catholic Radio Hour, broadcast from the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Father Quinn said that St. Patrick is one of the brightest names in the annals of the saints, a name honored by believer as well as unbeliever. He stands out, not merely as the patron saint of Ireland but as a world figure, as one of the mighty towering giants of humanity, whose apostolic deeds have left their imprint on the history of the world, Father Quinn declared.

"To us," he said, "as to the Irish of old, Patrick brings a message, a message which, if harkened to, will bring us peace of soul on this earth and joy unending in the next life. 'Cling fast to your faith in Christ. This is the victory that overcometh the world—your faith. Remember that faith is a gift from God, and being a gift, it may be withdrawn. It may be lost. It may be destroyed. Trifle not with your faith.

"From all sides our faith is being attacked. While so many around us are being carried off to their destruction in the madly raging torrent of unbelief, may we, through the help of that great apostle of the faith, ever resist that torrent and at the end of our lives be able to say with him and St. Paul, 'I have kept the faith.'"

The Rev. Francis J. Hurney presided at the service. The Rev. Stanislaus A. Czyz was celebrant at benediction. Miss Kathryn Bowers and Miss Florence Yocum sang.

English Party Hit By Illness Crisis

Sir Oswald and Leaders Unresponsive as Crusaders Lose Ground in Fight.

London, March 15 (A.P.).—The budding "new party" of Sir Oswald Mosley appears to be facing a crisis in its very infancy what with illness of its leaders and an unfavorable response from its organized constituents.

Influenza and pleurisy have robbed the young crusaders of their bold chieftain, Sir Oswald. W. J. Brown, probably Mosley's ablest sympathizer, has gone to the Mediterranean for his health and others of the group are suffering from seasonal illnesses.

While five Mosleyites have resigned from the Labor party, none has succeeded in obtaining a vote of confidence from their local Labor organizations. The Mosleyites have adopted the "cheek and humbug" attitude of Lady Cynthia Mosley toward their critics.

BOTH PARTIES GET WARNINGS OF 1932 ISSUES

LEADERS ARE SCORED ON PROGRESSIVE WAR

Ayers Begs Democrats to Avoid Either Dry or Wet Campaign Planks.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

With Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, and Representative William A. Ayres (Democrat), of Kansas, serving as political meteorologists, warnings went out to both of the old parties from Capitol Hill yesterday.

Senator Johnson, who was Theodore Roosevelt's running mate on the Bull Moose ticket of 1912, criticized the Republican leaders for jeering at the Progressives who recently met here, and he warned that they had better "take stock of the Republican party."

Pointing to the reverses the party suffered in the last election, Senator Johnson said that "something is radically wrong somewhere" and that "somebody should ascertain what it is."

Democrats Get Warnings.

Representative Ayres, one of the leading Democrats in the House, admonished his party to steer clear of prohibition in its 1932 platform; to write in neither a wet plank nor a dry plank.

Either one, he said, would cause a cleavage in the party that would be fatal to its success. Urging that economic issues be stressed, he declared that Democrats should "repudiate" leaders who would try and write a wet plank into the platform.

The Progressives, it developed yesterday, are going ahead with plans to set up a permanent organization for carrying on the work started at last week's conference.

Speaking Tours Planned.

Some of the senators who took part in the conference expect to go on speaking tours and advocate the reforms that were outlined at the conference.

Not only will the policies of President Hoover be attacked, but the ideas of Chairman John J. Raskob of the Democratic national committee, as well.

Four of those who took part in the Progressive meeting had a luncheon conference at the Capitol yesterday—former Senator Jonathan Bourne, of Oregon; Senator George Norris (Republican), of Nebraska; Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and Senator Edward T. Costigan (Democrat), of Colorado.

Progressives Are Praised.

Senator Johnson was not at the Progressive conference last week, and, in his statement yesterday, he said that he could not give wholehearted approval to all the conclusions adopted there. Nevertheless, he added, the Progressives deserved praise for undertaking a discussion and study of important questions.

"Can anyone," he asked, "imagine the standpat wing of either party meeting together with earnest and able experts, and publicly discussing economic problems?"

Then the Californian took what

Calvin Coolidge Says:

The seventeenth day of March will be celebrated all over the world by those who cherish the Emerald Isle as the place of their ancestral origin. Millions of devoted men and women will wear some green emblem in honor of St. Patrick, the patron Saint of Ireland. If his life is shrouded somewhat in mystery that only makes him the more fascinating. He is the personification of the Christian influence that came into the life of the Irish people.

Considering the large contributions that the Irish race has made to the freedom and progress of so many foreign lands it must be a great satisfaction to see Ireland, after a long struggle, at last peaceful and self-governing. The effort and energy that had been expended in generations of political agitation and strife have been turned into constructive purposes. The country is being restored. Education is fostered, industries are coming into existence. The River Shannon has been harnessed to furnish light and power for the whole Irish Free State. The railroad system has been unified. While there still remain economic problems and domestic differences Ireland, no longer a prey to despair, is a land of hope and progress.

Widow May Survive Suicide Mate's Shot

Mrs. Grete von Bayer Has Chance; Tragedy Laid to Ill Health.

With attending physicians holding that she has an even chance to recover, Mrs. Greta von Bayer lay on a bed in Emergency Hospital last night, her back and right arm pierced by a bullet fired by her husband, William Hector von Bayer, associate forester in the Indian Service, who then shot himself to death.

Her survival will mean the semi-fulfillment of a homicide-suicide pact into which Mrs. von Bayer, 45-year-old society matron and teacher of piano, entered with her husband when she was unable to dissuade him in his determination to commit suicide because of ill health. He was 52 years old.

The tragedy was conceived and executed yesterday in the couple's suite in the fashionable Chevy Chase Apartments, near Chevy Chase Circle. Mr. von Bayer, well-known attache of the Department of the Interior, used an old-fashioned .44-caliber frontier revolver, which it is

ESSAY CONTEST OPENED TO ALL HIGH SCHOOLS

THE POST BESIEGED BY BOYS AND GIRLS

Flag Contest Scope Enlarged by Donor

Any student of any senior or junior Washington high school, public or private, who is between the ages of 14 and 18, is eligible to compete for selection as a Washington "Envoy of Friendship" for the forthcoming European trip sponsored by the United States Flag Association.

This was made clear yesterday by Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, patroness for the two Washington winners and who will defray all their expenses on this trip. Mrs. Loose explained that she intended from the first that any high school student of the required age should be eligible, and failure to mention the private high schools was merely an oversight, due to the haste, because of lack of time, with which the preliminary announcement was prepared.

Younger Washington, especially that portion that attends the senior and junior high schools of the city, has a new topic of conversation—the free trip to London and Paris to be given two Washington students by Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, through the United States Flag Association, with the cooperation of The Washington Post.

Interest in the essay contest which is to determine the selection of the fortunate boy and girl, is already city-wide, and wherever high school students meet, copies of The Post are being eagerly read and speculation as to possibilities of winning the trip is rife.

Stormed with inquiries from the moment of first announcement of the plan in The Washington Post, the United States Flag Association officials have referred every inquiry to The Post, declaring that all plans for the trip will be fully disclosed in this publication. Applications can be made only on the proper blanks, and these are being prepared in time to be placed in the hands of all high school teachers by Thursday.

School Officials Cooperate.

This arrangement has been made with the consent and cooperation of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and Dr. George Johnson, director of the National Catholic Education Association, all of whom have heartily indorsed the plan to send "Envoys of Friendship" to England and France with the idea of building for future peace among nations.

Rational patriotism is the keynote of the idea back of the trip, according to Col. James A. Moss, president general of the Flag Association. Col. Moss, a West Point graduate, who has fought in three wars and who has written 37 military books,

LABOR REGIME MEETS DEFEAT BY FOUR VOTES

SPLIT ON BILL IS LED BY SIR JOHN SIMON

London, March 16 (A.P.).—Sir John Simon, icy calm in a wildly excited House, tonight led ten other Liberals into the opposition lobby at a division on a clause of the electoral reform bill, and Ramsay MacDonald's government was defeated by four votes.

Sir John is the man who warned the government not long ago he would vote as his conscience dictated, regardless of party tactics. He and the ten men who followed him were enough to defeat a clause abolishing university constituencies by 246 to 242.

When the result was announced thunderous shouts of "Resign, resign" came from the Conservative benches, but Ramsay MacDonald did not resign.

Situation Muddled Ahew.

It never had been seriously suggested that the government would step out if it were defeated on this issue, and any immediate sensational developments appeared unlikely although the defeat adds a new complexity to the already chaotic political situation and its ultimate effects may be of considerable importance.

On the heels of the vote Stanley Baldwin demanded of the prime minister a statement as to the course the government intends to take regarding this measure, and Mr. MacDonald said he would consider that before the bill was presented for discussion again.

His immediate problem is to decide whether he will proceed with the bill at all. The Conservatives regard the measure, the chief provisions of which is creation of the alternative vote system, as a bid by the Laborites for Liberal support in the trades disputes bill.

Whole Bill May Be Dropped.

But now that the Liberals have virtually killed the trades disputes measure in committee, and since eleven of them voted against the government tonight, it was thought probable the whole electoral reforms bill would be dropped.

David Lloyd George and the main body of the Liberals were with the government in tonight's division.

The defeat is the sixth the Labor government has suffered since it took office. The largest majority against the administration was 32 on the education bill in January. All of the others have been very small.

Ghastly Sea Disaster Viewed by Islanders

Detonation From Viking's Powder Magazine and Ensuing Fire Described by Dwellers of Settlement 30 Miles Distant.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, March 16 (U.P.).—The first eyewitness accounts of the disaster which resulted in the destruction of the sealing ship Viking came from residents of Horse Island this evening.

The following is a compilation of stories told by persons who saw the explosion and the desperate efforts of the 150 men on board to reach safety over the drifting, treacherous ice-floes.

An explosion was heard about 9 p. m. Sunday. Soon afterward a ship was seen in flames. Residents in fishing villages 30 miles distant saw the glare.

The explosion split the after part of the vessel. It blew the greater portion of the deck and most of the upper structure several feet into the air. Debris was scattered for yards around on the bleak ice. In the debris were many dead, dying and maimed men.

Twenty minutes after the explosion the forepart of the ship was also aflame. It was kept from sinking by the closely packed ice barrier, and the residents stood and watched it burn almost to the water before the charred embers disappeared beneath the ice floe.

The first survivors reached the island early this forenoon. They reported that the Viking was blown up as a result of an explosion in her magazine. The terrific force of the explosion nearly broke the vessel in two amidships. The stern, from the engine room, aft, was shattered into splinters and sank quickly, they said. Only a few occupying berths aft escaped, and most of them were seriously injured.

Members of the crew in the forward section of the ship made a hurried escape. They scrambled onto the ice dressed as they were when they leaped from their berths, taking neither clothing nor food with them.

All the crew were aboard, most of

WIND AND SNOW ADD TO RESCUE DANGERS

Survivors, Suffering From Burns, Without Food and Medical Aid.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, March 16 (U.P.).—A poignant drama of the Far North was being enacted tonight on ice floes and on the little Newfoundland Horse Island, following an explosion which shattered the sealing ship Viking and left it, a flaming hulk, to burn to the water's edge.

The disaster occurred at 9 p. m. Sunday. It was not until this afternoon that word of the wreck reached the outside world, and with news of the wreck came the threat of additional tragedy.

More than 100 of the ship's crew of between 140 and 150 were reported drifting helplessly on ice floes which were being driven offshore by a northwest wind.

Two Reported Saved.

There was grave fear here and at Horse Island that many of them must perish unless steamships picked them up.

Three Americans were among the ship's crew. It was typical of the scattered news from the scene that while two of them were reported saved, no one knew which two.

One of the Americans is Varick Frissell, a Yale graduate and scientist thrill seeker, of New York. He had been making a motion picture of winter sealing and was determined that its Far Northern scenes should be authentic.

The others are Harry Sargeant, recent Harvard graduate, of Boston, and fellow explorer, and A. E. Penrod, of New York, and Frissell's camera man and close friend.

Occupied Cabin Berths.

There were conflicting reports all evening as to the Americans. After the first report that two were saved, came a second that all were saved and that one was injured slightly. Then there followed a report from Horse Island that all three Americans were missing and were feared dead. There was no confirmation of any of these reports.

The Americans occupied cabin berths, and the ship aft of the engine room, where they were, was blown to pieces.

Capt. Abram Kean, master, was injured but was reported saved. The navigator, wireless operator, ship's doctor and cabin cook were listed as missing.

Here is one picture of the situation at dusk as it was radioed here at 5 p. m. from Horse Island:

Watchers on Shore.

Watchers on the shore at the south headland can see small groups of the shipwrecked men struggling over loose, drifting ice toward shore.

Occasionally a man falls as if exhausted and disappears on the surface of the ice or into the water.

The islanders were helpless, as their frail boats are unable to contend with the drifting ice.

The weather is cold, but not freezing as the sun sinks. A more hopeful picture is drawn here than the

T. G. JOSLIN NAMED HOOVER SECRETARY

Capital Correspondent for Boston Newspaper to Succeed Akerson.

An appointment with a Horatio Alger aspect was announced at the White House yesterday, that of Theodore G. (Ted) Joslin as secretary to President Hoover.

Mr. Joslin, for 15 years a Washington correspondent for the Boston Transcript, began his career as an office boy, according to the White House announcement.

He succeeds George Akerson, another newspaper man, who recently resigned to accept a $30,000-a-year position with the Paramount-Publix Corporation.

Mr. Joslin, who is 41 years old, is regarded as a keen political analyist. For many years he has toured the country during political campaigns, and is credited with "calling the turn" on numerous occasions. He was one of the first newspaper men to predict that Massachusetts would vote for Alfred E. Smith in 1928.

He was born in Leominster, Mass., on February 28, 1890, the son of Frederick A. and Hannah G. Joslin. He was educated in the public schools of Leominster. Upon graduating from high school in 1908 he became an office boy in the Boston Bureau of the Associated Press.

He remained with the "A. P." until 1913, serving successively as office boy, telephone operator, manifolder, pony editor and Rhode Island correspondent with headquarters in Providence.

On September 1, 1913, Mr. Joslin joined the staff of the Boston Evening Transcript, and in 1916 he was sent to the Washington Bureau of that newspaper. In 1924 he was made chief of the bureau. He is a member of the Gridiron Club and the National Press Club.

Mr. Joslin married Rowena A. Hawes, of Reading, Mass., and they have two sons, Richard Hawes Joslin and Robert Edward Joslin. The Joslin home is at 202 Raymond street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Like President Hoover, Mr. Joslin has a reputation for being a "glutton for work." In addition to his regular newspaper stories he has written a great many articles for magazines. He also has the same hobby as the President—fishing.

He will assume his new post when the President returns from his Caribbean trip.

3 VIKING RESCUERS PLOW THROUGH ICE

Ships Battle Floes to Save Survivors of Blast on Horse Island.

New York, March 16 (A.P.).—Three steamers tonight were plowing through the ice floes off the northern Newfoundland coast toward Horse Island, where the sealing ship Viking was blown up yesterday with reported heavy losses in killed and injured. Among the 150 persons who were aboard the Viking were Varick Frissell, Harry Sargent and A. E. Penrod, members of a talking picture expedition.

Bowring Brothers, Ltd., owners of the craft, tonight received a telegram from their agents at St. Johns stating that 60 members of the ship's company had landed at Horse Island. Earlier in the day the company had been advised twenty persons had been killed and many injured.

C. W. Bowring made public the telegram received from the line's agents, as follows:

"Very difficult to get details about those men. About 60 have landed at Horse Island. Others making fair progress toward the island.

"No word of Frissell, Penrod and Sargent.

"Their names not mentioned by the men who have landed, either as dead, injured or missing.

"Weather clear, temperature moderately cold."

It was the second direct communication reaching the company's officers since the mishap.

Frissell was the promoter of the talking picture outfit bent upon filming Northern "shots" with sound. Harry Sargent was an explorer and A. E. Penrod a camera man.

Captain Missing.

Bowring Brothers had no news of their captain, Abram Kean, jr., but other advices indicated he had been seriously injured.

Messages from Harbor Grace told of the captain's fate and added that a cook, a steward, navigator and the ship's doctor were missing.

The three ships trying to reach the scene were the Imogene, of the same company as the Viking, a steel vessel; the Government tug Sagona and the salvage steamer Foundation Franklin. They were believed to be

CHAPLAIN ACCUSED AFTER JOLIET RIOT

Joliet, Ill., Mar. 16 (A.P.)—A tumult of accusation against an ousted chaplain rose above the rumbling of rebellion in the old State prison today.

Turning from his announcement that a second prisoner had died of wounds suffered in Saturday's riot, Warden Henry C. Hill charged that the Rev. George Whitmeyer had fomented discontent, carried messages for convicts and, knowingly or not, had been a messenger in a jail delivery plot.

"My conscience is clear, and I am not afraid of an honest investigation," replied the clergyman, former pastor of an Episcopal parish at Herrin. He had tendered the requested resignation February 25, terming the killing of three escaping prisoners three days previously "murder."

A crescendo of rebellion rose today as the "grapevine" carried word of the death of George Jakowanis, shot by a guard during the uprising Saturday. His was the sixth death among the convicts in a month—three ran into waiting gunners as they lowered themselves from the stone walls February 22; Joseph Coakley's death from a clot on the heart while in solitary confinement last week precipitated a legislative investigation, and two were killed and two wounded in the riot.

A reversion to normal routine seemed no nearer tonight, and National Guard companies in Northern Illinois were under orders to be ready for service on an instant's call. Tomorrow a legislative committee will resume its inquiry at Springfield while a coroner's jury here sits in judgment over the death of the two convicts.

Mr. Whitmeyer denied every charge against him and said he knew he was to be "framed." He said he

ROCKVILLE RESIDENT ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

Eugene Cissel, 40 years old, member of a prominent Montgomery County family, last night shot and killed himself at his home in Rockville. A certificate of suicide was issued by Dr. G. V. Hartley after a consultation with State's Attorney Stedman Prescott and Policeman Harry Merson, who investigated the death.

Mr. Cissel had been despondent for more than a year, friends said, and his wife had taken unusual precautions to prevent his shooting himself while in a fit of despondency. She had removed the magazine from the pistol but the fatal bullet in the chamber had been overlooked.

The husband had gone into his room to dress and his wife was in the bedroom next to his when she heard a shot. She ran into the room and saw Mr. Cissel stretched out, half clad, on the bed with blood streaming from a bullet wound in his forehead. She called neighbors who summoned Dr. Hartley and Policeman Merson.

Mr. Cissel had held the pistol in his right hand and pointed it at the center of his forehead. He is believed to have died almost instantly. Dr. Hartley issued a certificate of death by suicide and then turned his attention to Mrs. Cissel who was hysterical. The body was removed to the Colonial Funeral Home at Rockville.

Mr. Cissel was born near Darnestown, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Cissel. His father served two terms as a member of the Montgomery County Commissioners, and the son later became a clerk in the office of the county commissioners at Rockville. He left nearly ten years ago to engage in the real estate business under the firm name of Cissel & Offut. Several years ago the firm dissolved partnership and he became an em-

Several Are Dead In Wreck of Train

Bristol, Pa., March 16 (A.P.).—Several persons were reported killed when four cars of Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train, No. 230, bound from Philadelphia to New York, left the track and rolled down an embankment here tonight.

Ambulances were called from all hospitals within 15 miles, including the St. Francis Hospital in Trenton.

Missing Girl, 7, Slain; Suspect Held in Cell

Battered Body of Child, Skull Crushed, Found in Attic of Neighbor's Home; Prisoner Moved as Mob Threat Grows.

Conemaugh, Pa., March 16 (A.P.).—The battered body of Betty Mowry, 7, who had been missing from her home here since last Friday, was found late today under the attic floor of the home of Harry Starchok.

The skull of the child had been crushed. Mrs. Matthew Swab, coroner of Cambria County, said the child had been assaulted.

The girl's hands were tied behind her, and her body, badly beaten and bruised, was partly wrapped in old burlap bags.

Starchok, who is 28 years old and married, was arrested a short time later and taken to the village police station.

A large crowd gathered about the jail as the report of the finding of the body was circulated about town, and police rushed him out the back door to the Cambria County Jail, in Johnstown, 2 miles away, when threats against him were heard from men in the crowd.

Starchok's wife, Margaret, 22, was taken into custody a short time after the arrest of Starchok. She is being held without bail.

An intensive search has been carried on since the disappearance of the child, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mowry, believing she had wandered from home and drowned in the Conemaugh River. Search in the stream ceased only this afternoon when police, acting on an anonymous "tip," went to the Starchok place, located only a short distance from the Mowry home.

Signal Lights Urged as Aid In Apprehending Criminals

Extension of the Police Department communication system is under study by Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, and other District officials.

The radio system of communication with scout and patrol cars cruising about the city has justified its inauguration, Maj. Pratt believes. He cited one example of the efficiency of the system: A woman, unable to sleep, saw a man vainly trying to start an automobile parked in front of her apartment. She became suspicious when he raised the hood and got the engine started and telephoned the police. The radio-equipped scout car arrived on the scene before the thief had got the automobile away from the curb.

The only defect with the radio system of communication, Maj. Pratt believes, is that it eliminates secrecy of communications broadcast.

This defect he proposed to eliminate by installation of signal lights on police patrol boxes throughout the

Jobless to Get Sweaters Knitted by President's Wife

Mrs. Hoover Presents Five Garments to Red Cross; Capital Women's Unit of Society Devotes Meeting to Sewing for Unemployed and Families.

(Associated Press.)

Five sweaters knited by Mrs. Herbert Hoover brightened the meeting yesterday of the Red Cross Unit organized by Mrs. Edward Everett Gann to make garments for the unemployed and their families. The sweaters varied in color and size, some being for children and others for adults. They were presented by the First Lady on the eve of her departure for Asheville, N. C., to visit her son, Herbert Hoover, jr.

Work on garments has been sandwiched between social engagements, care of her grandchildren and other activities. Mrs. Hoover likes to knit. She dressed two dolls in imitation of her little grandchildren last Christmas to sell at the local Thrift Shop. Little knitted sweaters of pink and blue which she made was part of their outfits.

A year ago her needles were busily flying as she spent many hours on a couch recovering from a sprained back. While knitting she received a

REV. M. B. M'BRYDE URGES LENT AS AID TO SELF-DISCIPLINE

REPRESSION ADVISED TO CONSERVE POWER

Curb on Anger Illustrates Advantages to Be Gained in Personal Training.

The observance of Lenten fasting as representing the spirit of self-discipline was explained to the congregation of Grace Episcopal Church yesterday by the Rev. Mead Bolton MacBryde, pastor of the church, in a Lenton sermon, "When Ye Fast."

"We have no life of our own, no power of our own, until we can pin it down, curb and control it," he said.

Mr. Bolton MacBryde's sermon, in part, follows:

One of the most interesting studies is the study of customs. Each age and generation has its customs which seem odd and antique to the generations that follow.

Customs in Christ's Time.

There were, no doubt, many customs in vogue in our blessed Lord's day which had existed and which He may be said to have inherited. Christ constantly warned the Scribes and Pharisees against abiding too closely to certain forms and customs. He said on several occasion, "Woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, for you pay tithe of mint, anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law—judgment, mercy and faith."

When our blessed Lord walked the streets and saw the Jews standing in the market place, and on the street corners making loud and long prayers, He realized what a hollow form many of these practices or customs had become, but He does not condemn such customs, but urges their earnest and sincere observance, here as in other matters.

Did you ever stop to think that the most important service of the Christian Church—the Holy Communion—grew out of the fact that Christ took bread and broke it?

So here, He takes what is at hand and blesses it with His insight, and crowns it with the hope of what it ought to be. There is no sneer in His words when He speaks of fasting, and He takes it, uses it, and lo! it becomes what it should be. He says to them—"When ye fast," and then tells them how fasting may be rightly, and wisely, and helpfully used.

Teachings of Men.

There are scores and scores of men in all parts of the world writing and speaking and teaching how the world should be reformed, how the church should be abolished, or reorganized; how wealth should be taken from the rich, how the present economic and social condition should be overturned—that is condemnation—but how few there are who take the world as it is, and would be willing to spill their blood to improve it.

One man who can prove that he is unenvious of wealth when it is rightly and wisely used, who accepts the present economic and social condition, and strives to the utmost to make them fair to all, that is fulfillment. Such men have their disappointments but they mold them into grace.

When Christ turned to His disciples and said to them "Moreover, when ye fast," He saw clearly that the hypocritical fasting of the Pharisee could be turned to good account.

What a splendid "Sword of the Spirit" Peter could have had if he had taken the molten iron of his temper and had allowed it to become as hard as steel. What splendid possibilities of good Christ saw in Judas, if he had but starved his selfishness and have killed his greed of gain.

For all those men—there was fasting—of one kind or another, that could have helped them to a wonderful extent. Throngs of people followed Christ and leaned upon His strength—children ran to Him and climbed into His lap. Think you that giving out so much of Himself He was not at the same time restraining and controlling and starving the flesh that the spirit might be strong?

Build a wall across a stream and watch how the current will rush and dash against it, and notice what a torrent will pour through when the barrier is removed. No power can be gotten from steam so long as it is free and unconfined, but restrain it, compass it, and then it will carry you over land and sea.

Estimate of Lent.

Many people, if they think of the Lenten season at all, think of it as having but scant significance and small value in these times, and there is an observance so superficial that it is absurd; but on the other hand, there are scores of people for whom the spirit of Lent—the philosophy that underlies this season—could be and, in some cases, is a wonderful help. Men who need to stop for a time and find out if they control themselves or whether habits and sins control them.

We have no life of our own, no power of our own, until we can pin it down, curb and control it. Have you never noticed that it is frequently the man of the highest degree of nervousness who can on occasion be completely calm? The most intense silence, the most perfect hush, in all nature is that which comes just before the storm. If you have no hours of quiet and recuperation, if you have no time when your nerves are still, you will have no strength to withstand the strain.

Guard Against Evil.

When the quick, angry, cutting speech comes to your lips, close them and keep them closed. When the temptation comes to do some deed which you should not do, clinch your hands and hold yourself in.

When you dream of some great deed, go instead and do some inconspicuous bit of self-sacrifice. When you long for recognition and for publicity, go home to your fireside and "brighten up that corner."

The form of it matters little; the philosophy of it and the spirit of it is everything. Is there anything more weakening than noble dreams and good resolutions without the fulfillment of them? Lofty aims but no real attempt to realize them. To kneel in this church today, to go to yonder altar and receive the Holy Communion, and then not to fulfill the high ideal of worship—not to live through the coming week in the spirit you have professed here today, is merely weakening and deteriorating to your moral nature.

QUINN ASKS PEOPLE TO CLING TO FAITH

A message of St. Patrick to cling to the faith was reiterated yesterday by the Rev. Peter F. Quinn, noted Marist preacher, in the second of a series of radio sermons on the Washington Catholic Radio Hour, broadcast from the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Father Quinn said that St. Patrick is one of the brightest names in the annals of the saints, a name honored by believer as well as unbeliever. He stands out, not merely as the patron saint of Ireland but as a world figure, as one of the mighty towering giants of humanity, whose apostolic deeds have left their imprint on the history of the world, Father Quinn declared.

"To us," he said, "as to the Irish of old, Patrick brings a message, a message which, if harkened to, will bring us peace of soul on this earth and joy unending in the next life. 'Cling fast to your faith in Christ. This is the victory that overcometh the world—your faith. Remember that faith is a gift from God, and being a gift, it may be withdrawn. It may be lost. It may be destroyed. Trifle not with your faith.

"From all sides our faith is being attacked. While so many around us are being carried off to their destruction in the madly raging torrent of unbelief, may we, through the help of that great apostle of the faith, ever resist that torrent and at the end of our lives be able to say with him and St. Paul, 'I have kept the faith.'"

The Rev. Francis J. Hurney presided at the service. The Rev. Stanislaus A. Cryz was celebrant at benediction. Miss Kathryn Bowers and Miss Florence Yocum sang.

English Party Hit By Illness Crisis

Sir Oswald and Leaders Unresponsive as Crusaders Lose Ground in Fight.

London, March 15 (A.P.).—The budding "new party" of Sir Oswald Mosley appears to be facing a crisis in its very infancy what with illness of its leaders and an unfavorable response from its organized constituents.

Influenza and pleurisy have robbed the young crusaders of their bold chieftain, Sir Oswald. W. J. Brown, probably Mosley's ablest sympathizer, has gone to the Mediterranean for his health and others of the group are suffering from seasonal illnesses.

While five Mosleyites have resigned from the Labor party, none has succeeded in obtaining a vote of confidence from their local Labor organizations. The Mosleyites have adopted the "cheek and humbug" attitude of Lady Cynthia Mosley toward their critics.

The screaming siren of a Casualty Hospital ambulance opened a traffic lane. In its wake came the shrill warning of the fire rescue squal car. A physician brought his automobile to a screeching stop at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. A police scout car, radio equipped, lent the din of its siren to the noise.

Doctors, policemen and firemen rushed into an apartment house. An excited crowd gaped through the apartment house door. Must be a murder," some one said, and the others nodded in grave approbation.

"Oh, a lady gave her baby castor oil. She made a queer face and her mother thought she was choking," was the response from a doctor.
